Children Can't Really Build Hospitals.
But You Can

John Swainson
President & CEO,

"CA is very pleased to support
Schneider Children's Hospital in their commitment to deliver world-class pediatric care to the children who need it most."

At CA, we are committed to improve the quality of life in communities where we live and work worldwide. We take special pride in supporting organizations, programs and initiatives that enrich the lives and well-being of children and young people. By supporting Schneider Children's Hospital and establishing the CA Pediatric Wellness Center, we achieved both.

Schneider Children's Hospital is an extraordinary nexus of world-class pediatric care and exciting new research, where children from around the corner and around the world find hope and healing. It has earned an international reputation for excellence and innovation in pediatric oncology, cardiology, neurology and trauma. What's more, as the host of one of the nation's largest pediatric residency programs, Schneider Children's Hospital is putting an indelible stamp on the practice of pediatrics worldwide.

But with more and more sick children seeking treatment each year, the Children's Hospital is bursting at the seams. We must build a new inpatient hospital. Our children deserve it!

And that is where we need your financial support. Schneider Children's Hospital has embarked on an ambitious quest to raise the $100 million it will take to build this new hospital to serve the growing needs of sick children worldwide. There are many opportunities for families and corporations to create a lasting legacy while making a critical difference in thousands of young lives.

Call 516-465-2569 today and help us make this dream come true. Their hope is in your hands.

CHATEAU BEYNAT CUVÉE LEONARD 2003 (Cotes de Castillon)

Sale Bottle 15.49 Sale Case 185.88

Here is a juicy, ripe and delicious Merlot dominant blend from the satellite region of Cotes de Castillon, which is renowned for its exceptional wine and great values. (4828)

CHATEAU CARVIN 2001

(Premieres Cotes de Bordeaux) 13.95 167.40

Look for red berry fruits that are in perfect harmony with light vanilla oak. The palate is round and structured with lingering fruit and soft oak tannins. (4804)

CHATEAU HAUT DU PEYRAT 2001

(Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 12.95 155.40

When the Blaye vineyards were classified in the 19th century, this was one of the top crus bourgeois. Made of 80% Merlot, this is a full and stylish wine. (4810)

CHATEAU JOUANIN CUVÉE

PRESTIGE 2003 (Cotes de Castillon)

11.49 137.88

Located along the right bank of the Dordogne River, Jouanin produces a charming wine that offers immediate pleasure due to its high proportion of Merlot. (4820)

CHATEAU LABATUT-BOUCHARD 2001 (Cotes de Bordeaux)

11.95 143.40

For 5 generations, the Bouchard family owned this vineyard. Its current proprietors purchased it in 1998 and are dedicated to excellence. Soft tannins balance ripe, concentrated, sweet fruit. (4817)

CHATEAU LASCAUX 2001 (Bordeaux Superieur)

A blend of 60% Merlot, 20% Cabernet Sauvignon and 20% Cabernet Franc, this wine comes from vines that are 35-40 years old. It is very concentrated with notes of blueberry, black raspberry and black currants with a touch of spicy vanilla. (4811)

CHATEAU MAISON NEUVE 2003 (Montagne St.-Emilion)

Sale Bottle 15.95 Sale Case 191.40

A superb combination of 60% Merlot, 30% Cabernet Sauvignon and 10% Cabernet Franc, this 2003 combines uncommon backbone with a framboise-scented nose, rich texture and an agreeable style. (4821)

CHATEAU MAYNE VIEIL 2001 (Fronsac)

11.49 137.88

Made From 90% Merlot and 10% Cabernet Franc this Fronsac is well structured with good concentration and elegant tannins. (4815)

CHATEAU PEYRAUD 2003 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye)

9.95 119.40

Powerful and full, the wines from this small estate offer great value in Bordeaux excellence and have become one of our most popular Unsung Heroes. (4816)

CHATEAU PLAISANCE 2001 (Premieres Cotes de Bordeaux)

14.95 179.40

This is a small, 100-year-old country residence that was purchased and renovated by Patrick and Sabine Bayle in 1984. The vineyards enjoy a southern exposure and produce outstanding wine. (4801)

CHATEAU ROLAND LA GARDE

"TRADITION" 2003 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye)

12.95 155.40

"I can't say enough about this 13.1-acre site. The vineyard, which includes sand, clay, and limestone soils, is situated near the well-known garagiste estate of Valandraud and another up-and-coming St.-Emilion, La Fleur Cardinale. A blend of 85% Merlot, 10% Cabernet Sauvignon, and 5% Cabernet Franc." - Robert Parker (4833)

Subway!

Long Lost Subway Tunnels are Found Throughout the Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

(with a tip of the hat to Ron Stanchfield)

As most people know, the single most spectacular real estate development ever attempted on the East End was that of Carl G. Fisher. In the mid 1920s, he bought the entire peninsula of Montauk, 12,000 acres in all, and during the years between 1925 and 1929 began to build a great city in that community. The centerpiece of it, built on the downtown plaza he created in a field, was the seven-story building that continues to dominate this community to this day. But he also built a polo field, a race track, a yacht club, a gambling casino, a boardwalk and swim club, a 250 room hotel high on a hill — it still stands as the Montauk Manor — the entire network of roads in downtown Montauk, including pink sidewalks which survive in many areas, half a dozen downtown commercial buildings, two churches and an automobile racetrack. He also imported sheep and built a section for the help known as Shepherd's Neck. (Still in existence.)

His intention from the get-go was to build a big beach resort city, similar to the one he had built in the early 1920s in Miami Beach. Among other things, he had recently been married for the third time, to a 16-year-old named Jane. These were heady times for millionaire Carl Fisher.

What has never been known until now is that while Carl Fisher and some of his wealthy friends were building Montauk (it failed in the crash of '29), there was a lesser known and very shady figure by the name of Ivan Kratz, a wealthy builder, who had designs on the creating a transportation monopoly for the Fisher project.

Ivan Kratz, between 1900 and 1925, had

By 1924, however, he was under investigation as part of the Teapot Dome scandal. Amazingly, in 1928 when it came time to look for the money Kratz had made — he was by this time the owner of a vast oceanfront mansion in East Hampton — it all came up empty. Where had the money gone?

Last month, auctioneers selling the contents of the Kratz mansion — only recently sold by his heirs — came upon an extraordinary document. Copies of it were turned over to the Town of Southampton and the Town of East Hampton. And representatives of the New York State Department of Transportation had become involved.

Kratz, between 1925 and 1929, had secretly constructed an enormous underground subway system that he called the South Fork Subway. It has its main terminus right under the open plaza in downtown Montauk.

And it is connected up to underground "stations" in Napeague, Amagansett, East Hampton, Bridgehampton, Southampton, Quogue and Westhampton Beach. There is a spur that goes up to Sag Harbor and North Haven, and another that goes up Three Mile Harbor Road in East Hampton and then splits off to end at Maidstone Park in Three Mile made millions by building the New York City Subway System. His work was good, but the way he went about securing contracts was crooked. In 1900, offering up a whole slew of bribes to New York City officials, he had bid high but got the contract to build the New York City Subway System. By paying notoriously low salaries to his workmen, he made huge amounts of money at both ends.

We've been through it from end to end. It has the same white ceramic tiles on the walls that they have in the New York Subway.

Harbor and Gerard Park at Accabonac Harbor.

"At first," said Tom Larson of the NY State Department of Transportation, "we thought that the subway map that had turned up at the auction was some kind of joke."

But then Town bulldozers from the two highway departments were brought in, and the first of the holes was dug — the first just under the large and unused gas ball in Sag Harbor just behind the Post Office. In just four days of digging, the workmen uncovered twin platforms, two sets of rails including a third rail that went down into some dark tunnels, a ticket booth, some turnstiles and a flight of stairs that went up to a steel bilco door that had been covered up by grass. The Sag Harbor station for the G Train.

"We made three decisions," Larson said. "We agreed not to go public with whatever this was until we knew what it was, we agreed to send workmen in golf carts down the tunnels, and we agreed to remove the gas ball."

The gas ball was taken away, piece by piece, in May. And it was inaccurately announced, to throw people off, that the dig where the gas ball was had to do with some sort of underground pollution. Also, it might be necessary to remove some commercial buildings in the area. Indeed, the state is already in negotiations to condemn the first of those buildings.

"It's all in place," Larson said at the press conference. His eyes welled up with tears. "The whole thing. We've been through it from end to end. And it's all there. It has the same white ceramic tiles on the walls that they have in the New York Subway. The names of all the stations in blue tiles. There are eighteen stations. And all we have to do to make this whole thing operational is bring in a modern air exchange system to the tunnels, build some escalators to get down to the platforms to bring this up to code — there were no escalators in use in subways until the 1940s although they surely had them — and bring in some subway cars. The track gauge is also from the New York Subway. In fact, we believe that all these materials were FROM the New York Subway system. Stuff supposedly "stolen" by Kratz and brought out here. It's all amazing. And it is an answer to our prayers. The transportation nightmare in the Hamptons is over."

Someone asked the locations of all the underground subway stations and he told them. There is one under the parking lot at the Montauk Lighthouse, there is one under the crossroads of Flamingo Road and Westlake Drive at the fishing village there, there is one on Ditch Plains Road where it makes the ninety degree turn to the left, there is one under the Kirk Park Beach parking lot in downtown Montauk named "Montauk Beach" which is what Carl Fisher called the place, there is one just under the Montauk Railroad Station, another behind the restaurant called LUNCH on the Napeague Strip, one at the corner of Montauk Highway and Napeague Lane in Beach Hampton and one in the Amagansett parking lot by the Amagansett railroad station.

Other locations heading further west include under the intersection of Further Lane and

A Record Number of Fireworks Displays Went Off this Weekend

By Dan Rattiner

"Man, did I have a Fourth of July weekend."

"Tell me about it."

"Well, on Friday night we went over to Southampton to watch the fireworks on Meadow Lane. We sat on the beach. It was quite a sight. And loud. Amazing. It was a benefit for the Southampton Fresh Air Home.

"Then Saturday we drove to the classic East Hampton fireworks on Main Beach and sat right in front of the beach pavilion. The ground shook. We left just before the crowds, and we drove from there up to North Sea to catch the fireworks at Firemen's Field. Then we watched the really, really loud fireworks at the Sag Harbor Yacht Club at Havens Beach, crossed on the ferry just in time to watch and listen to the fireworks at Crescent Beach on Shelter Island, then swung back and went down to the Devon Yacht Club fireworks on Gardiner's Bay. What a night that was.

"We rested up Sunday, then went up to Greenport to watch the fireworks down at the waterfront on the Polo Grounds, then on Tuesday headed down to Riverhead for this huge fireworks display over the Peconic River hosted by the Wildlife Rescue Center. It scared away the fish, I'm sure. Then we raced out to Montauk where the Chamber of Commerce hosted a Grucci fireworks right on the ocean beach in front of the Umbrella Inn. What a weekend."

"Could you just turn your head to the....."

"You know what's coming up? The big fireworks on Three Mile Harbor hosted by Fundacion Amistad on July 22. They're shot off from a barge in the harbor. And it's by Grucci. So could you look in my ears, doc?"

"You have to turn your head....."

"Just tell me which way you want me to turn my head."

"What?"

AMAGANSETT AND THE PRESIDENTIAL WAR POWERS

By Dan Rattiner

The stunning decision by the Supreme Court last week regarding the activities of our president has an interesting connection to the Hamptons.

After 9/11, President Bush declared he had unlimited war powers within his role as Commander in Chief and would bring them to bear on our enemies. He would not need the approval of Congress to do this. Thus his administration taps our phone calls, examines private banking records and creates prisons where, call it what you will, torture is carried out.

The Supreme Court did not rule on whether or not any of these activities were within the bounds of the law. What they did rule was that there are three branches of government in our democracy, and each one checks on the other two. By doing what he did in secret, without the approval or legislative instruction from the Congress, he was in violation of the Constitution. Incidentally, our form of government is not terrific because it was given to us by divine inspiration or because our people are better than other people. It is better because it reigns in greed and illegal behavior that runs rampant when there isn't such a system.

The connection with the East End involves an event that took place at one o'clock in the morning on June 13, 1942. We were at war at the time. Six months earlier, there had been the attack on Pearl Harbor. The next day, President Roosevelt asked Congress to declare war. And in short order Congress did, first naming Japan and then a few days later, Germany.

Now, six months later, June 13, 1942, four German terrorists came ashore though the surf at what is now known as Atlantic Avenue Beach in Amagansett, with instructions to kill people and blow up things in order to cripple the American capacity to make war. On the list given to them were railroad junctions, factories, bridges and — not surprisingly — several Jewish owned department stores. —

They were not called terrorists at the time. They were called spies. Spies look for certain behavior and report it back to headquarters. These were terrorists.

The confusion might have come about because the German military trained them in Bavaria at a Spy School, and when they arrived off our shores late that night, they emerged in full Nazi uniform from the top hatch of the submarine that had taken them across the Atlantic. They were taken through the surf in an inflatable boat by the crew members from the sub, and they set foot on our shores, unnoticed. Immediately, they took these uniforms off and disguised themselves in jeans, sneakers, baseball caps and flannel shirts to appear to anybody who might come upon them as American fishermen. They had achieved something that Hitler had thought was particularly important. Uniformed German soldiers had landed on American soil. This achievement would play a considerable role in what happened later when it all became a legal matter.

The Germans buried explosives, weapons and their uniforms in boxes on the beach in Amagansett. They were just about to walk through the dunes to the Amagansett Railroad Station and an early morning train to New York City, when they were approached by a Coastguardsman named John Cullen patrolling the beach looking for exactly the trouble he had just stumbled upon.

"Who are you?" he asked.

Cullen was 22 years old. And he was unarmed. One of the Germans took him aside. He told him if he knew what was good for him he would forget having seen them. A threat was made against his mother and father. And then he was given cash and told to get out of there. Cullen ran all the way back to the Coast Guard Station five miles away. And by the time he finished reporting what he had seen, and the Coast Guard had mobilized soldiers from a military base at Camp Hero in Montauk, the Germans were long gone. On the beach, the boxes were dug up. But not a thing about that encounter appeared in the newspapers during the next few weeks. Congress had long since passed, and the President had signed into a law, the censorship of all war material going into any newspapers.

The four terrorists checked into a hotel in midtown Manhattan and, following orders, stayed there awaiting contacts. They played cards. They listened to the shortwave radio. They went shopping at Macy's. They saw the sights. They did speak English, so none of this was a problem.

On the third day, with no contact arriving, they began getting irritable. Tension within the group was high. The following morning, one of them, George Dasch, left to go out to do some shopping; and, instead, immediately hailed a cab and went to the New York City office of the FBI. He would turn the others in.

But the FBI in New York thought he was a crackpot. And they turned him away. Undeterred, he went to Penn Station and took a train to Washington. There, late in the afternoon, he stood in the lobby of the main FBI office and refused to leave until he could have a meeting with J. Edgar Hoover.

He never did get that meeting. But he did get a meeting with one of the higher ups at that headquarters who did believe him. Dasch was urged to tell all. He would become an American hero, he was told. He gave out all the information that he could. And the FBI came to the hotel and arrested the other three.

Then the stories, with screaming front-page headlines, began to appear in the daily papers around the country. J. Edgar Hoover gave a speech. These spies had been caught. It was due to the vigilance and bravery of FBI agents. These Germans were now in jail. Hoover wanted everyone, including Adolph Hitler, to know that the spies had been caught through the efforts of FBI. Not a word was mentioned about Dasch.

The connection between this incident and this week's decision by the Supreme Court is in how the President Roosevelt, who was also Commander in Chief of the American Armed Forces, dealt with these four Germans.

The Germans were in a jail in Washington, not far from the White House.

"Try them and put them to death," Roosevelt said.

State Court Overturns Ban on War Protesters at Parade in Southamptton

By Dan Rattiner

(with assistance from Joan Zandell)

In the year I published the first edition of Dan's Papers in Southamptton, the float receiving the first place award in the annual Memorial Day parade was the North Sea Batmobile. This was a very long time ago, 1967 in fact, but it gives you an idea of the sort of thing that went on in Southamptton when it came time to honor our soldiers or celebrate the founding of this country. The North Sea Batmobile was about thirty feet long, had a motor that made it sputter and bang as it rolled along, and it spit smoke, water and fire out at the people on the sides of the road. The following year, a group from the Southamptton Historical Society stole the Batmobile just before the parade, and hid it. During the night, frantic members of the North Sea Fire Department located the Batmobile, and got it back up North Sea Road to a repair shop just in time to be fixed up and entered again. So it won again.

The North Sea Batmobile

I mention this because just as there was the Vietnam War on in 1967, there is a war on now — the War in Iraq. And though the big parade now is on the Fourth of July rather than on Memorial Day as it was then, it still involves patriot games, fun, clowns and a celebration of our country.

But this year, there was a difference. Although there was almost a difference. For the first time in memory, the people that run the Southamptton parade, specifically the Commander of it, William A. Frankenbach, wanted to curtail certain behavior. And he defined that as anything other than behavior that in a dignified way would promote the positive message of this year's parade: supporting our troops and Letting Freedom Ring. He issued a letter to all potential participants of this year's fireworks.

TO ALL PARTICIPANTS:

The Fourth of July is a celebration of the birth of our nation. It is a CELEBRATION — not the appropriate time to express political views.

COACHING THE NEW YORK KNICKS AS A GAME SHOW

By Dan Rattiner

For over a half a century, the most important sports team occupying Madison Square Garden was the New York Knicks. This basketball team was, for many years, a big contender for the league championship if not, in fact, the champion. But ten years ago, when the owner of a Long Island TV cable network named Charles Dolan bought Madison Square Garden, what went along with it among other things was the Knicks. From that moment on, the Knicks went into a steep decline, and were not heard from again until the autumn of 2005. At that point, Charles' son James was in charge of the team and was demonstrating even less dexterity in putting a good basketball team together than his father had. James Dolan and team president Isiah Thomas, a former star basketball player (and arguably the only person who knew anything about basketball), had run through five consecutive failing coaches. And so they went for the gold ring.

They hired one of the world's greatest basketball coaches, Larry Brown, to come in. Brown would coach the 2005-6 Knicks. He would be paid $50 million for five years. And he would have free reign about which ball players to hire and let go, with Isiah assisting him.

It did not turn out that way. The big problem, it seems, was that the decision about which players to hire got turned upside down with Thomas doing the choosing and Larry Brown

ENTREES THE DAY OF THE PARADE if it does not meet with our criteria, which is to promote A POSITIVE MESSAGE supporting the theme of the parade — "Support Our Troops, Let Freedom Ring." Anyone not complying with this criteria will not be permitted to participate.

Yours truly,
William A. Frankbach
Chairperson

That Mr. Frankbach, a former soldier who served in the Second World War might be excused for thinking this was proper, it seems to have passed above his head that the way he was insisting the parade be fashioned actually would serve a specific criteria — his.

Excluded from celebrating the Fourth of July and the democratic home of the free and land of the brave are, besides those who would like to clown around and have fun such as those who built the old Batmobile, those who might wish to express a contrarian view of the policies of the current administration. Mr. Frankbach's instruction would have made for a well starched and fine parade indeed, but it would be somewhat like the old Mayday Parades in the Soviet Union. March in favor of us or else.

Some of those who participated in this parade in prior years, having gotten this instruction on June 30, just five days before the parade, were not going to put up with having these restrictions put upon them.

Among those getting together to consider the matter were members of the Bill of Rights Defense Committee, the Unitarian Universalists Congregation of the South Fork and a group called the East End Veterans, many of whom have protested in the past against the War in Iraq, and, in prior years, have participated in the parade. All had been told they would not be marching this year.

It was short notice — June 30 was a Friday after all and government offices would be closed until the day after the parade — but what was needed was for someone amongst them, a member of the Bar, to drive to Islip and find a judge and seek a temporary injunction against the Village of Southampton and the Parade Committee and others to force them to allow these groups to march in the Fourth of July Parade.

Jim Henry of Sag Harbor, an international media correspondent and an attorney, agreed at 2 p.m. to make the trip. At 4:45, just moments before the courts were scheduled to shut down for the weekend, he found a judge willing to look at the problem.

He handed the Judge, the Honorable Joanna Seybert, a complaint, a summons, an order to show cause and 10 affidavits from plaintiffs hoping to get a preliminary injunction so these people could march. The judge, considering the time and the day, was at first reluctant to take the matter on, but after hearing Mr. Henry further, agreed to open court on Monday, July 3 for a special session. The Mayor of the Village, the Village attorney Richard De Petris and of course

He SCORES!

This Country (and this Author) Begin a Soccer Transformation

By Dan Rattiner

After fifty years of trying, it appears that the game of soccer might finally be appealing to sports fans in America. Until now, it hasn't. We've watched in amazement as soccer fans around the world tear down walls, stampede, beat each other over the head with bottles, riot in the streets, set themselves on fire, get themselves arrested and otherwise behave in a way about this particular sport that leaves what we do in America pale by comparison.

What is the big deal? One team tries to kick a ball into a net for an hour and a half while the other team tries to stop them. Ho Hum.

Last week, however, I finally got it. And I have to tell you there is no turning back.

What did it for me was a World Cup game between Australia and Italy. The winner moves on. The loser goes home. The announcers explained that the Italians were faster, smarter and more athletic and hadn't lost in nearly two years. The Australians were just plain lucky to have gotten to the seed of sixteen. They were slow, stolid and not particularly athletic. They were a big underdog.

When I tuned in, the first half was about half over and the score was nothing nothing. The score seems always to be nothing nothing in soccer. Then maybe somebody scores something. So what?

And you could clearly see how, in front of this crowd of maybe a hundred and twenty thousand people, that the Italians were superior. They were better dancers, big, 6' 2" dancers. And they propelled the ball with their feet or backside or head (hands are illegal) in such a way that was a joy to behold. But they weren't scoring.

In fact, the Australians were holding them even in terms of possession of the ball and shots at the goal. How could this be? When you looked closely, what you saw was that the Aussies had one thing and only one thing going for them. They had a very good ability to

PLAYWRIGHT EDWARD ALBEE IN A MAGICAL PLACE

By David Lion Rattiner

It is impossible to determine the most beautiful locations out here; there are just too many. But if you absolutely had to make a decision on THE most beautiful place on the eastern end of Long Island, The sixteen-acre LongHouse Reserve Museum in East Hampton would certainly be in the running. One of the greatest writers of our time, Edward Albee, knows this about the LongHouse Reserve, and its beauty, among other things, inspired him to a sculpture exhibition there. The show is titled "Some Sculpture: Albee's Choice" and it will remain there throughout the summer until September 16.

Last Saturday there was a colloquium and reception at the Longhouse, where five of the six sculptors, Willard Boepfle, DeWitt Godfrey, Mia Westerlund Roosen, Richard Nonas and Ned Smyth, along with Edward Albee, spoke in a panel format in the LongHouse's outdoor amphitheater. The reception was attended by about 150 people. Sculptor Casper Henselmann is in Europe and was unable to attend.

Jack Larsen's vision of the LongHouse Reserve, which is to be a place that exemplifies living with art in all forms, literally takes your breath away as you walk through the magnificent gardens that are home to countless large pieces of sculpture. Walking through it is like walking through a dream. Every piece of work there is as unique as the LongHouse itself and each piece of work captures your emotions in a different way. Stunning is a good word to describe this place, but it is difficult to put into words the amount of beauty and creativity that electrifies through the air in this place. It is impossible not to notice.

In turn, the sculptors went into great detail about their work. The six large sculptures surround the amphitheater, which was Mr. Albee's plan, and the artists each spoke about confronting this strong space and the relationship it holds to their work. Mr. Albee interjected the quick and humorous comments that we have all come to appreciate and love. "There is something that I have noticed that is different about painters when compared to sculptors. Sculptors are much, much more articulate."

WAINSCOTT HIT & RUN WOMAN DENIED PAROLE

By David Stoll

Leslie Jenneman will remain in jail for at least two more years, according to the New York State Board of Parole. Since 2004, she has been serving a prison term of two to six years, to which she was sentenced following a jury verdict against her in connection with a hit-and-run accident. The Parole Board concluded that Jenneman remains a danger to society.

Back in 2002, when Jenneman was driving home through Wainscott late one night in her new Jeep Cherokee, she hit a migrant farm worker, Henry Anthony Yarrell. She drove off, and the 38-year-old father of three died. Jenneman was caught when she brought her car to an auto repair shop for detailing work the Monday morning after the accident. She told the mechanic that she had hit a deer. But when the mechanic saw the blood, he became suspicious, as he had just received an APB about the man who was killed. He called the police, who connected the car with the accident victim. By this time, it was too late to test Jenneman's blood-alcohol level.

At her trial, evidence was presented that Jenneman had been drinking that night at Saracen, and later that night had a tryst with a friend who had followed her home and witnessed the accident. Although she did not take the stand in her own defense, her lawyer advanced the theory, as she had told the mechanic and police, that she thought she had hit a deer, not a person. Nevertheless, the jury concluded that she was aware that she hit a person and chose to leave the scene of the accident. This resulted in her conviction. An odd side-note to the trial was that one of the testifying officers was found to have perjured himself, but the false testimony was not found to have affected the verdict.

The 48-year-old Jenneman, incarcerated at the Beacon Correctional Facility in Dutchess County, continues to maintain her innocence. The Parole Board, however, would have none of it. The three-member Board concluded that her release after only two years of imprisonment "would be incompatible with the welfare of society and would so deprecate the serious nature of the crime as to undermine respect for the law."

Jenneman will next appear before the Board in May 2008. If parole is again denied, she will become eligible for conditional release in July 2008. Before her conviction, she lived in Noyac and was a real estate agent in Bridgehampton.

But what the artists had to say was incredibly captivating and interesting. Willard Boepple described to the audience what he tries to do when he creates a piece of work. "When a person sees my work, I want them to feel like they are standing in front of another human being. I want them to feel as if they desire to get to know what is standing before them."

The largest sculpture is a group of cylinders made from steel by DeWitt Godfrey, who talked about what it is like to work with steel, his inspirations for making the sculpture and how Edward Albee has been following his work for twenty-five years.

At the end of the discussion, Mr. Albee playfully said, "Just so you know, all of the sculptures that are present here are for sale and I'm sure that the sculptors here are asking for a completely unreasonable sum of money for them. But if you are interested, feel free to inquire, because I am sure they will be willing to negotiate."

If you can find the time, you absolutely must head down to the LongHouse Reserve to not only view the choice sculptures in the exhibition, but also to experience the LongHouse Reserve itself.

Japanese Historians Repeat a Famous Historical Visit in Reverse

By Alan Michael Braveman

Four members of the Japan Historical Society visited Captain Mercator Cooper's home on Windmill Lane in Southampton this past weekend. This was a very historic visit.

In 1845, Captain Mercator Cooper of Southampton and two of his Southampton deckhands, one African-American and one Native American, aboard the ship Manhattan, were the first foreigners ever to arrive in Japan from abroad and receive a warm reception. Indeed, Phyrus Concer and Eliazar, the two people of color, were the first ever to be seen in Japan. Japan had been closed for almost two hundred years to all foreigners before that landing.

Captain Mercator Cooper was a whaling boat captain who sailed his ship from Sag Harbor to the Pacific Far East in search of whales, and was certainly not looking for a stop-over in Japan. Japan was known to be very dangerous and inhospitable to foreigners. A previous American vessel that had tried to land in Japan several years earlier had been driven away under deadly, withering cannon fire. Other foreign or western sailors who had been marooned or shipwrecked in Japan had been killed. The Japanese Emperor considered foreigners to be very detrimental to his country and overwhelmingly undermining to the Japanese culture. (He was probably right.)

But Captain Cooper had come across some stranded Japanese sailors whose boat had sunk and rescued them. Then a short time later Cooper found some additional Japanese sailors whose boat was also in trouble. He took all these Japanese sailors on board his ship, fed them and clothed them and learned a few words of their language. Then as the ship and that he intended to sail into Japan and safely deliver these rescued men."

On April 18th, 1845 Captain Cooper received a message from the Emperor of Japan that he had official permission to land in Japan. A little while later, the Manhattan was escorted by three hundred ships with about 15 men on each who towed them into a bay. The ships formed their boats around the Manhattan with a guard of about a 1,000 men. The Japanese naval guard also took all the arms from the Manhattan and only then was a visit by some Japanese officials conducted. The officials were friendly but managed to convey a message that anyone trying to leave the ship without permission would be killed. The Japanese visitors exhibited a great deal of curiosity about the ship and in particular the two crewmen that Capt. Cooper had brought with him from Southampton.

Concer and Eliazar, a Shinnecock Indian, caused a great deal of conversation and amazement on the part of the Japanese visitors to the ship. The most strident portion of the conversations between Capt. Cooper and the Japanese visitors occurred when the Japanese insisted on touching their skin.

Two days later on April 20th, Capt. Cooper

Manhattan sailed towards Uraga, Japan, Capt. Cooper was guided by a sailing chart of the seas around Japan that he had found on one of the foundering ships whose sailors he had rescued. As the Manhattan approached Japan, Captain Cooper was able to transfer some of the rescued sailors to a Japanese craft with a message to the Emperor "that Capt. Cooper had additional Japanese sailors on his was provided with provisions by the Japanese.

These provisions included sacks of rice, wheat, flour, sweet potatoes, fowl, radishes, wood and tea. Along with the provisions was a message from the Emperor that "Captain Cooper and his ship were never to return to Japan again." The Manhattan sailed out of the Bay of Japan under escort from 300 boats that towed them almost 20 miles out to sea on the 21st of April. After a trip to Russia and Amsterdam the Manhattan returned to Sag Harbor on Oct. 14th of 1846.

The charts that Capt. Cooper found that showed the navigation through Japanese waters played an important part in Commodore Perry's trips to Japan when Perry managed to reach an accord with the Emperor to provide better trading rights as well as better treatment for shipwrecked American sailors.

Phyrus Concor returned to Southampton after failing to find his fortune in the California Gold rush. His role on the Manhattan was that of Boat Steerer or Helmsman, as well as that of "Lancer." This meant that he was the sailor who delivered the death blow to the whales after they had been harpooned. Concor may have been one of the people that Herman Melville based his character Queequeg on, in the great American whaling novel, Moby Dick. Phyrus Concor had been a slave in the Pelletreau family household before he was freed. The Pelletreau family's Silversmith shop still exists on Main Street in Southampton and can be visited by special appointment. Concor went on to become one of the outstanding citizens of Southampton and eventually founded the first ferryboat to carry people from one end of Lake Agawam to the other. That ride cost 5 cents. At that time there was no church in Southampton with a black congregation so Concor joined the First Presbyterian Church. He left a bequest of several hundred dollars to the church to be used for youth programs. That particular bequest is still bearing fruit to this day. Before Phyrus Concor died in 1897 he had become "one of the most respected citizens of the village," according to the Southampton Press and his passing caused a monument to be erected in his honor on Pond Lane across the street from his home. He is buried in the North End Cemetery in Southampton.

Of the Shinnecock Indian Eliazar nothing else is known.

Captain Cooper returned to Southampton to become one of its more prominent citizens and his home is now part of the Rogers Library. A monument was erected in Cooper's honor in Southampton Cemetery on Windmill Lane and a second Monument was erected in his honor in Tokyo in 1972. He still has some direct descendants living in Southampton who proudly bear his name.

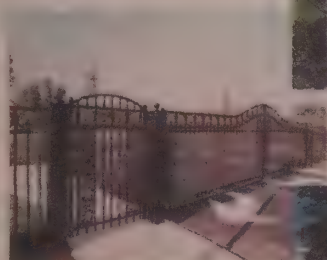

There is no whaling industry left in America, and Sag Harbor is celebrated as once having been one of the greatest whaling ports. Now transformed into a town that still revels in large boats, Sag Harbor today hosts mainly pleasure crafts, some twice the size of any whaling ship that ever shipped out of these waters.

The Japan Historical Society visitors were enthralled with the town of Southampton and were amazed at the condition of Capt. Mercator Cooper's former home. Their collective opinions reflected their satisfaction with the trip and went a long way in bringing the Mercator Cooper story to life after so many decades of research among the dusty old ship's logs and diaries.

A farewell luncheon at B. Smith's restaurant in Sag Harbor, overlooking the bay where Capt. Cooper departed in 1845, was the perfect way to end their trip to America and commune with the spirit of Captain Mercator Cooper.

Southampton Village Legalizes Hill Street Synagogue

By David Stoll

After two years of hearings, submissions, discussion and debate, the Southampton Village Zoning Board of Appeals has granted a waiver to the Chabad of Southampton Jewish Center, located at 214 Hill Street, to hold services, despite the residential (as opposed to religious) zoning. In less than five minutes the decision was made, with no outrages, no arguments, just four "ayes" to one "nay." Chabad of Southampton will have to make a number of changes to its property, a 4,000 square-foot house on less than 3/4 of an acre, including replacing a swimming pool with parking spaces and establishing hedges on the east and west property lines.

Chabad is an acronym formed from three Hebrew words meaning wisdom, understanding and knowledge. A Hassidic intellectual movement originating in the Russian town of Lubavich, Chabad is intended to help all Jews (however religious) become more in touch with their heritage and spirituality.

The history of the dispute has been reported many times. The basic facts are as follows. In 1999, Rabbi Rafe Konikov and his family purchased the house at 214 Hill Street for under $450,000. The next year, they obtained a permit to gut a portion of the first floor, removing a fireplace and two bedrooms and turning the space into a sanctuary with bookshelves and an ark containing the Torah. An Orthodox practitioner of Judaism, Rabbi Konikov then opened Chabad of Southampton, which according to the Rabbi is the first synagogue in Southampton's history. He and his family live on the second floor of the house.

The problem is that the space does not comply with the zoning codes for a religious institution, which requires, among other things, a much larger lot and greater frontage. As Chabad of Southampton became more popular, with more and more congregants parked on Hill Street, community opposition formed, lead-

DATEHAMPTON.COM LAUNCHES JULY 8 IN AMAGANSETT

By Dan Rattiner

It's sad here in the Hamptons when you don't have a date. You can look at the sunset and say aloud wow, what a beautiful sunset and hold out your arm to indicate what a beautiful sunset it is and you can turn to the side and look and smile and there will be nobody there.

You can go fishing, play tennis, play golf, go to the polo matches, eat at a restaurant, take a walk through the woods or along the beach, attend a gallery opening or a fundraiser and it'll be no fun. You can go shopping, but for ONE? For some people, I suppose, that is all fine, but for the rest of us, there has got to be somebody else.

Which brings us to this Saturday night July 8 beginning at 7 p.m. where, at Steven Talkhouse in Amagansett, you can come celebrate the founding of the new website datehampton.com. There will be handsome guys and hot girls running around wearing datehampton.com t-shirts, but if you ask them for a date, they will probably just refer you to their profiles on datehampton.com. But it will be something. There will also be a cash bar, a free drink special and a band.

"The main thing about datehampton.com," said its co-founder David Lion Rattiner, "is that when you join up on the site, you will know for sure that the people you will be meeting will either be residents of the Hamptons or New York City. They will be the good people who know the Hamptons."

Well, almost. If you ask someone at datehampton.com if they've eaten at the new Laundry, or even at the old Laundry, and if they come up empty, as they say on "The Sopranos," "fuggetaboutit."

Datehampton.com and its parent company, Local Online Dating Inc., is a venture owned ing to hearings and litigation.

Thus far, these facts are not in dispute, but then, each side staked out a strong opposing position. The opposition groups contended that the Synagogue was reducing local property values because of the parking and crowds and even "odors" coming from the kitchen. There were also allegations that the congregants were "unruly." Supporters, of course, take umbrage at the allegations of unruliness and odors, and claim that the opponents are anti-Semitic. In response, the opponents say the supporters are playing the race card, and deny any motive other than a desire to preserve a residential atmosphere and property values.

Opponents also allege that Rabbi Konikov kept secret his intended use of the house when the permit application for the first floor was submitted. He denies trying to deceive anyone, and insists that he wants to be a good neighbor and a part of the community. Moreover, during the hearing process and in answer to criticism about crowds and parking, he agreed to limit occupancy to 35 in the off season, 65 during the summer season, and 80 during certain Holidays.

After endless hearings and briefing, the Southampton Village Zoning Board has decided that Chabad of Southampton may remain open, granting a waiver from the religious use rules, but with certain caveats. The 35-page decision, reflecting a vote of four in favor and one against, concluded that the religious use of the property is not inconsistent with the neighborhood, given that almost adjacent is the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, the Southampton Inn and the Southampton movie theater, not to mention heavy year-round commercial traffic, including day workers and trucks. The Board also noted that other houses of worship not meeting the zoning requirements are located on Village streets that are far quieter than Hill Street.

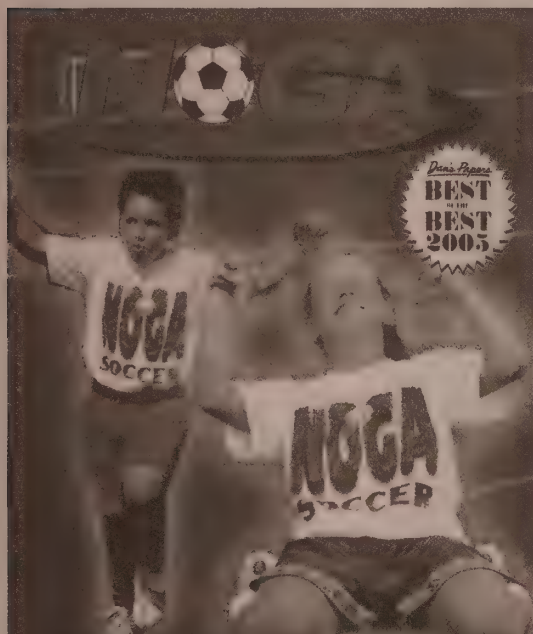

But the Board did acknowledge homeowners' concerns by requiring Chabad of Southampton to take steps that will mitigate crowds and parking. The current driveway (a circular driveway in front with an extension leading to the back) will be replaced with a two-lane driveway leading to the parking spaces. On each side of the house, 20-foot high hedges will be installed, for aesthetics and noise abatement. And the occupancy rules that have been voluntarily adopted will now be legally required. In addition, the swimming pool will have to be removed to make room for 16 parking spaces behind the house. Plans reflecting the physical changes will have to be submitted to the Southampton Village Planning Board. Fees for past parking violations have been waived, so that the money can be used for the required changes.

If opponents are not satisfied with the Zoning Board's ruling, they would have to bring a lawsuit in the New York State Supreme Court, and convince the Court that the Zoning Board abused its discretion in granting the waiver with caveats, rather than denying the waiver altogether.

According to Chabad of Southampton's website, "Chabad is a place for all Jews, regardless of their background, education, affiliation, or level of observance. Chabad is inclusive and non-judgmental, and our programs are open to all Jews. Many people who come to Chabad are not religious, and some have little, if any, Jewish education. If you're Jewish, you are welcome at Chabad!" In addition to services on Friday evenings and Saturday morning and evenings, Chabad of Southampton offers Hebrew school for youths as well as adult education, "mommy and me" groups and kosher cooking classes.

Perhaps in light of the Zoning Board's ruling, the Southampton Village will add Chabad of Southampton to the ten churches listed in the section of its web site under "Places of Worship" located within the Village.

Removing Foreign Phragmites Brings Huge Ecological Benefits

By T.J. Clemente

Early in the spring, Larry Penny, director of the Town of East Hampton Natural Resources Department, completed a project to help control flooding in the Ditch Plains area of Montauk by creating a pond with a weir installed to take excess water through a culvert underground to Lake Montauk. Phragmites, a thick tall grass that grows at the edge of ponds, would be removed in order to promote the return of the native landscape and thus prevent flooding. The reason was the native plant life would absorb more water. At least that was the theory. The heavy rains at the end of June were the first test of Penny's weir and the results were very promising. Flooding was down drastically and the project, now a success, has put Larry Penny in a position to widen the program to include new locations in the town. The new locations are Fort Pond in Montauk and along Westlake Drive in Montauk.

This time the project will not be building a new pond but eliminating the phragmites.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife service claims that the phragmites that are dominating the ecosystem in these areas are not native phragmites that once were in the area but an aggressive European strain recently arrived here. It spreads by seed and has a severe system of underground roots that simply dominate the ecosystem and kill off all other natural diversity of plant life.

So the Town plans to remove as much of the phragmites as possible to promote the return of the natural plant life thinking that this alone will play a big role in preventing flooding. The town is willing and ready to spend the $15,000 it was awarded by the state (one of 32 granted) to eradicate the phragmites.

Mr. Penny said, "The phragmites projects have great beneficial effects. There's more area to absorb, or just hold water. It increases the space. It holds the first inch or two of rain." He was referring to removing the phragmites and returning the plantlife that preceded the reed invasion for better protection when rain falls very heavily. Mr. Penny also added that slowing rain runoff would prevent coliforms and other pollutants from compromising shellfish beds in the lakes.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service claims that today thousands of acres are taken over by "invasive species" that harm the natural flow of life in those areas. Wildlife as well as plant life is affected. The town also has two applications to the State Department of Environmental Conservation to remove phragmites from Accabonac Harbor as well as Soak Hides Cove at the head of Three Mile Harbor. The residents of Georgica Pond Association are also looking to rid Georgica Pond of the troublesome European phragmites and have petitioned the Department of Environmental Conservation to go ahead with their own project. They received a ten-year permit and have the blessing of the town trustees to do this as a private venture. Currently, Georgica residents are paying for the removal of the tall reeds from the upland sections. The Town's Department of Natural Resources is clearing the reeds that grow along the shore and the bottomland on the areas owned by the town.

Most recently, the Lion's Head Beach Association waded into the fray to remove

In Westhampton Beach, there is a subway stop at the corner of Sunset and Main in front of Lucille's Beach Barn.

"We don't know why a station was not built in Hampton Bays," Larsen said. "Members of the Kratz family say that their grandfather once complained about a yacht he bought in Hampton Bays from a marina owner that sprang a leak and sank. That we think might be as good a reason as any. Anyway, if we get all this together, we think we will probably put in a Hampton Bays stop."

A reporter asked Larsen who will be in charge of restoring the system.

"I am pleased to announce today that Governor Pataki has created a Hampton Transportation Authority, with a base funding of ten million dollars. We will go from there."

A reporter asked if Peter Kalikow, who heads the Port Authority in New York and has a home in Montauk, might be interested in the job.

"It's possible," Larsen said.

Another reporter asked if Carl Fisher himself, who had an excellent and above board reputation, had been involved in this.

"We have dug deep in the Fisher archives," Larsen said. "Apparently he thought it was some kind of drainage subcontractor. He seems to have been aware of it, but that was about it. He was a big picture sort of guy."

"Any idea when the South Fork Subway will become operational?"

"We're looking at the summer of 2008."

phragmites. Many of the residents who live in the Hog's Creek area are beginning to wage a battle against the invading reed,

So, bolstered by the success that started in Montauk at Ditch Plains, Larry Penny and the Town of East Hampton, through the Department of Natural Resources have declared a war on the phragmites throughout the various section of the town. With one eye on reducing flooding which is good for the surrounding residents and roads and with the other eye trying to once again return to the ecosystem with its proper balance to its native state, they are now taking great strides to control flooding here out on the South Fork of the East End of Long Island.

Neighbor:

By David Lion Rattiner

There are a lot of famous people out here in the Hamptons and the list just seems to keep on growing. This year, Kelsey Grammer was added to that list after purchasing a house in Sagaponack.

In Bridgehampton, his favorite haunts include Starbucks and Almond, where he recently had dinner with Mayor Rudolph Giuliani.

But the actor, writer and director has led one heck of an interesting life. It is life filled with outrageously stupendous accomplishments, as well as bitter tragedies. His remarkable success on television and on the big screen has catapulted this man into the American and European spotlight, bringing to the public Kelsey Grammer's stories of family hardships and heartaches.

Born in 1955, the number of acting credits that Kelsey Grammer has received appears to be almost endless. He is a four-time Emmy Award winner and became the first actor in television history to receive multiple Emmy nominations for performing the same role in three series. When you think of Kelsey Grammer, you think of two television shows, "Frasier" and "Cheers." The actor joined the cast of "Cheers" in 1982 and the successful run led him into another super-hit as the lead role in "Frasier" in 1993.

Kelsey has made a very comfortable living playing characters that appear to be pompous and overly confident. He became the highest paid television actor for his role on "Frasier" earning $1.6 million per episode. He has received two Emmy nominations for his portrayal of Dr. Frasier Crane on "Cheers" and another for a guest appearance in the hit television program, "Wings," as well as nine nominations for his work on "Frasier." Now you can catch him playing Beast, in the new X-Men film that recently hit theaters.

Kelsey Grammer's voice is as recognizable as his face, which is why he is sought after for a lot of voice over work in show business. You have heard his voice in the movie Toy Story 2 where he played the Stinky Pete and

Kelsey Grammer Actor

He is a four-time Emmy Award winner and the first actor in television history to receive multiple Emmy nominations for performing the same role in three series.

also in Anastasia. He is also famous for playing the voice of Sideshow Bob in the super-hit "The Simpsons."

But with all of the success that Kelsey had in show business, the tragedies in his family has made his life a world of extreme highs and extreme lows. The deaths of his family members are the kinds of stories that make your stomach twist.

The six foot, one inch tall actor was born on another island known for tourism, St. Thomas, Kelsey's mother moved him to New Jersey after she divorced his father. When Kelsey was just 13 years old, his father was murdered on the front lawn of his home in St. Thomas. He had only had the opportunity to meet his father twice.

The tragedies did not end there. Kelsey has endured the premature, violent deaths of other family members as well. His sister, in 1975, was raped and murdered while leaving a Red Lobster Restaurant in Colorado Springs. Kelsey, who was 20 at the time, stopped attending classes at the Juilliard acting program in New York City and later had to leave the program.

What happened five years later can only be described as unbelievable. Both of his twin-half brothers were killed in a shark attack incident while scuba diving. During this time, Grammer had various drinking and drug charges brought against him, but this is now under control.

He has been married three times and divorced twice. He was married in 1982 to Doreen Alderman, a dance instructor, and was divorced in 1990, after having one daughter. In 1992, he married Leigh-Anne Cshany, but the marriage only lasted one year and they had no children. Currently, he is married to Camille Donatucci, and they have two children together. Grammer also has a daughter from a previous relationship.

Life has certainly thrown some awful curveballs at him, but Kelsey has been able to rise above everything that has come his way and has had the strength to maintain a good relationship with his children. It is obvious when you see him and his kids together, running around Southampton with smiles on their faces.

His life motto is, "Life is supposed to get tough," a motto that seems fitting for a guy who has experienced so many tough things in his life. It would appear that things today are looking very good for Kelsey Grammer. He has a beautiful new home and a summer of life in Bridgehampton to look forward to. After everything that this actor, writer and director has been through, he certainly will know how to appreciate all of it.

Amagansett (continued from page 26)

The Germans were soldiers and would be afforded a military trial. Roosevelt issued his death declaration to a Colonel Kenneth C. Royall, who was assigned the job of prosecutor. Also present was the military defense attorney, Attorney General Francis Biddle. His commander had just issued an order.

But the trial did not happen that way. Although held in secret, the transcripts from this trial were recently declassified. They show Dasch triumphant, proud that he had turned the others in. Repentant was another German, Ernest Peter Burger, who gave the FBI and the American commanders considerable information about the German Spy School. The others were defiant. Good Germans, is what they said they were. And they would have done their job.

In the end, four of the Germans were sentenced to death and hung. Berger was given life imprisonment without parole. And Dasch, who might have been an American hero, was given a sentence of ten years.

Roosevelt, one of our most beloved presidents, was apoplectic about what had happened. He railed and ranted at his Colonels.

But what was done was done. The Judges had ruled, and they had overruled the President. A check and balance had been in action. And the President had to accept that.

George Dasch, incidentally, was released during the administration of Dwight Eisenhower in the mid 1950s, but he was transported to Germany after his release, to emerge where there were still plenty of ex-Nazis about, many of whom would have liked nothing better than to get their hands on him.

No one ever heard of him after that. Berger died of old age in prison in the 1980s.

The procedures were then and are now to identify an enemy, the President to bring that information to Congress with a request to declare war, and then to proceed with the war within the bounds of the rules of conflict, with captured soldiers only being required to give name, rank and serial number, with no torture or abuse to follow. Soldiers could certainly be confined in POW camps. And they certainly could be shot. Officers were given better conditions. We were a democracy, not a vicious dictatorship. And that is how we conducted a war. As for terrorists, we had every right to detain and interrogate them. For a long period of time if need be, but not forever.

George W. Bush, since the day he assumed the Presidency, has, in matters of protecting the American people, assumed a course of action that could only be classified as "my way or the highway." Within two weeks of the start of his Presidency, he withdrew all American diplomats from the Middle East, saying that he had problems at home and they should work things out for themselves. Negotiations between the Israelis and the Palestinians came to a halt. He shunned all contact with Iran, North Korea, and, until he invaded them and set up a new government, Iraq. He ridiculed the French for what they decided to do, he belittled the United Nation and he publicly declared that anybody who didn't agree with how he would conduct the war on terror was against him. He also expressed little interest in Congress, as far as foreign affairs go, and so they rebelled when he approached them for domestic regulations. The lasting image of his Presidency is surely to be his landing proudly on an Aircraft carrier in a fighter in his Air Force flying suit. The lasting sound bite will be "bring 'em on."

All of that, now, will change. Perhaps the Congress will vote legislation authorizing some of what he wants done. Perhaps not. There is also the Geneva Convention to be dealt with. It's a remarkable thing, but not an unexpected thing, for a Supreme Court, even one lately laced with Bush appointees, to return America to its senses.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Grey Hair

Oh, my God, this can't be happening. It must be the light reflecting off the mirror in a strange way. I'm way too young for this to be happening. Is this normal? Is this seriously a grey hair?

I verified my discovery with five different friends and yes, it is true, I have a grey hair growing out of the side of my head. I don't understand how this could possibly have happened already.

I was feeling really old the other day, which is a pretty depressing feeling. My buddy, John Schirrippa, came out for the week over the holiday to his uncle's house in Amagansett and I got the update on his life.

"I got a promotion at the Pentagon. I'm going to be a supervisor there now," he said.

"That's crazy, man. Congratulations."

"What's new with you?"

"Well, I'm still working for my Dad at Dan's Papers and I moved out to Montauk. The real news is that I started up this website called datehampton.com. It's online dating, but for the Hamptons. I hope it works out. I've been worrying a lot about the future lately."

It was at this moment that John's cousin, Vinny (I'm not kidding), rolled by on a skateboard with only two wheels, called a "street surfer." He is thirteen years old. "COMING THROUGH!" he yelled as he passed between us at the swimming pool.

That looks like fun, I thought to myself. It looked easy enough. You just balance yourself on this skateboard type thing and weave along to gain momentum. You can't push off with your feet, which makes it very different from a regular skateboard, but it is still very cool.

I stopped Vincent and grabbed the board and declared to him that I was going to skate around.

"It's pretty tough, you need to practice a little. Put your weight on your left foot....."

"I got it man, I got it."

You need to practice. Who does this kid think he is talking to? An old man? I walked over to the board with confidence and tried to move on it. Boom! I landed hard on my ankle. I heard a little giggle from the teenager. Frustrated, I tried again, only to find myself falling again. It hurt like hell, but I acted like I was totally cool.

After about twenty minutes of trying to get on this stupid thing, I gave up, and handed it back over to Vincent, who then started masterfully weaving around the pool. I was injured, but didn't let anyone know, and sat down in a chair with my sunglasses on. I started thinking about my grey hair.

Should I pull it out of my head? Will two more grow back? Should I dye it? I found myself trying to do mental math in my head, dividing the number of years in my life into the amount of current brown hair follicles in my head and then using that number divided into the current amount of grey hairs in my head, to try and calculate how many years of brown hair I have left. I got confused, and was guessing on the ten thousand hair strands, so I gave up, again.

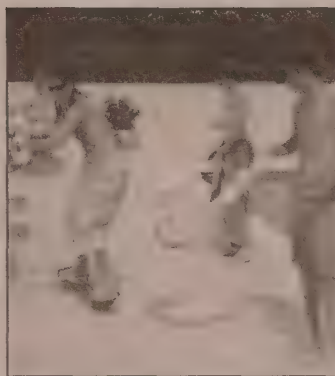

I had a headache now, and my back kind of hurt. "COMING THROUGH AGAIN!" the whipper-snapper flew by me with endless energy. I was feeling old.

"Feeling old, David?" John's aunt said to me from across the pool.

I just smiled, but on the inside I was saying, yes, I do feel old, but I think young, but don't want to think young, I want to think old, but feel young. I want to be wise, like Yoda in Star Wars. Yoda wouldn't try to skateboard on concrete around a swimming pool on two wheels. He'd be like, "Kid stuff that is."

Which brings me to the new Superman movie. I'm dying to see this movie. I'm absolutely so pumped to see it, you wouldn't believe it. I watch the trailer at my computer at work every fifteen minutes and think to myself, one day, I could grow up to be Superman, if I just do a lot of pushups and put my mind to it. I then start to debate who is hotter, the Lois Lane in the current movie, or the one in the previous movies. Why do I still think like a thirteen year old? This is getting ridiculous. I am twenty-three, pushing twenty-four, on the brink of twenty-five and still thinking the same way I did when I was thirteen, I think anyway. Jessica Simpson is 25 and she is so accomplished it is ridiculous. I only have two years, well a year and a couple of months really, of becoming as successful as Jessica Simpson at 25, who I heard was in Southampton over the weekend, by the way, which is why I brought her up. I think she is single, probably not for long. Whatever. The point is that the older you get the weirder things get. It was all so simple when I was thirteen. All I was doing back then was thinking about girls, learning how to surf and skateboard, my future, and the latest movie that just came out. Wait a second.

Scores (continued from page 29)

direct the ball to one another rapidly and accurately. They were running the Italians this way and that. And occasionally, they'd get in close to the goal and strike. But they couldn't score either.

Perhaps the most interesting thing I found out as I watched to see if this one-note team could defeat the Italians, was that the refereeing was poor. And almost deliberately so. Here was this field in area between one and two times the size of an American football field and there were only two referees. They did their best. But with only two men to watch this vast acreage, they couldn't see everything. And so they often made bad calls. For which they were forgiven.

There is no instant replay in soccer, and there is no business where one referee overrules another referee because he has a better view. Whatever is decided stands.

It was therefore very interesting to see, amidst the madness of the fans, this resolute obedience to whatever the referees decided. There would be a bad call and the fans for the team getting the benefit would go nuts. The fans for the other team would remain silent. Their turn would come. How European this was, I thought. How Old World. Complete obedience to authority is what it was. But of course, this sort of thing led to further mayhem.

On the field, a player, chasing an opponent who was dribbling the ball, would reach out and hurt the other guy to make him give it up. It had to be a secret hurt. Subtle. An elbow. A shove. And really not bad enough to cause serious injury. It would be just enough to be within the rules as interpreted by the out of position referee and enough to get the ball. But it was a foul gotten away with nevertheless.

As for the man being hurt, he would immediately fall down and, acting, writhe in pain. And the referee would either buy this or not. And then the game would move on. Often the man doing the hurting would help the man "hurt" to his feet. It was sportsmanship. I knew you'd do the same to me, was the implied message.

It seemed to be more important to everybody that this little charade take place than whether a player broke the rules. Often the commentator would say "a bad call" cheerfully, and then move on. Or he'd say "now there was a lovely bit of acting."

This game is subtle, is what I thought.

When the referees called an infraction, they took one of four courses of action. They'd reach into their pocket and pull out a yellow card, hold it up, and give the ball to the other team. Or they could reach into a breast pocket and pull out a yellow card and call a free corner kick by the other team. (This would on rare occasion result in a goal, kicked to the front of the net and then kicked or headed in by a teammate.) Or they could reach into their pocket and pull out a RED card. This might happen once or twice a game. It would happen if a player REALLY did a flagrant foul. And he'd be tossed out of the game. And you couldn't substitute for him. For the rest of the game, the team drawing the foul would have to play with only ten men instead of eleven.

But there was an even worse punishment. A REALLY flagrant foul would draw no card at all. But the referee would stop play — it continued on during the other transgressions — and award the injured team a "penalty kick" from right in front of the other team's goal mouth. Three out of four times, this penalty kick, in spite of the efforts of the goalie trying to defend it, would be successful.

The half ended tied at no score, the teams

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #406 Resort Rehab

Saturday morning, July 1st, I went to the IGA at 9 a.m. Usually there's three or four cars at that time. In tourist season, maybe 10 that early, but on this particular day, I did not see a single available parking space in the whole parking lot, including the sides. The tourists were out in force. It's not fair to complain about them because we need them to support the local economy and yet their presence so completely changes the demeanor of the Island, they just can't be ignored.

I've decided to swim in the direction of the river and let go of my resistance to them. I have committed to making the following changes in my life where tourists are concerned:

1. I will not get mad when they stop in the middle of the traffic circles and even loop around them a few times in an attempt to ascertain which direction they feel like traveling that day.

2. I will carry extra Island maps and a yellow highlighter to show them the quickest routes off the Island.

3. I will drive patiently behind gaggles of bicyclers who occupy the whole road and I will use that opportunity to practice meditation and resist the urge to hit the gas and plow through them.

4. I will not take advantage of the fact that we have no street lights (except for a few corners) and give them directions that will send them and their BMWs off a dock into the quiet blackness of the water. It's not nice and I really have to stop it.

5. I will not tell them how to get to Shell Beach because the lumpy road will ruin their shocks and they don't really need to be there anyway.

6. I will tell them that the waters around the Island are mercury laden and all the local shellfish are poisonous to all but Islanders who are inured to the mercury. It's not true, but the Bible says you should not eat shellfish, so if I tell them there's mercury in the clams and mussels, I am helping them become better people by not eating shellfish, and therefore doing them a favor out of the goodness of my heart.

7. I will not hurl cans from the back of the grocery line at IGA at the person who is loudly and rudely holding up the front of the line, I will not, I will not, I will not.

8. I will not ask 'la chic femme' tourists if their diamonds are real just to watch their indignant and agitated responses. It's too much fun and I really have to stop it.

9. When I see men wearing make-up, I will not compliment them on their shade of lip gloss. I will not, I will not, I will not.

10. I will not park my old van close to expensive cars just to make them nervous.

11. I will explain the difference between Ram Island Road and Ram Island Drive when giving directions. I don't want to, but I will as part of my rehabilitation.

12. I will not tell stories about killer osprey who occasionally swarm and peck people to death. It's a shame because I had a couple of really convincing stories and I know those tourists never returned once I confessed the secret of Shelter Island...

13. I will not warn tourists to check the beaches at night for radioactive glowing water coming from Plum Island before they go swimming there the next day. And that's a pity because that's a really viable story and I know I had a lot of them on the run.

14. I will not laugh when they hit their

Red White and Star-Studded

This past weekend, the Hamptons were the ultimate holiday destination! Every town was jam-packed with people and famous faces celebrating galore. Last Friday evening, the 18th Annual American Picnic raised more than 250k to benefit the 104-year-old Southampton Fresh Air Home, which caters to physically challenged children. The massive tennis courts in front of the Southampton estate were transformed into the ultimate party space. Eight hundred Hamptonites feasted on BBQ and enjoyed the festivities. But the real stars of the evening were the campers right next door who enjoyed their own wheelchair friendly, magical July 4th celebration. President Cathy di Montezemolo and the truly dedicated event chairs and staff including Ros and Fran L'Esperance, Pam and Bill Michaelcheck, Christl and Ken Meszkat, Heather and Steven Mnuchin, Kim White, Kurt Wolfgrüber, Kathleen Minder, David Billingham, Laura DeVinney and Barbara Tollis, surrounded the fifty-two campers as they all gathered outside to witness the spectacular Grucci fireworks display. ## Scores (continued from page 42)

retired from the field for twenty minutes, and then they came back to resume the conflict. I was surely rooting for the Australians. They were dogged, accurate and, if not imaginative, at least effective in this one thing they did really well. But the commentators predicted it could not go on forever. The Italians, with so many other attributes, would soon figure the Aussies' Johnny-one-note out. And then, when they did, dazzlingly, they'd score.

But that is not what happened. Midway through the second half, an Italian player got red carded for hitting an Aussie from behind as he headed for the goal. In football, we call this clipping. And now, and for the rest of the game, the Aussies would be up a man.

The commentators discussed this development. They talked about whether it was a fair red card, and after some discussion, concluded that it wasn't. They also noted that no team short a man had won a match in six years. But the play went on.

It's a rough game. And with the field the size it is and with the people running up and back all the time, it is a tiring game. The Aussies seemed to be tiring more than the Italians. And even though they were up a man, they could not score. In fact, when they had the ball, they seemed to be slowing down play. Nobody, not even the commentators, could figure this out.

With just eight minutes to go, however, Australia substituted two of their men with two others who are high scorers. And so the strategy was clear. Believing this would be a one-goal decision, they had lulled the Italians. Now they would show them.

Well, that didn't work either. The energy level went up, the defense and offense became more and more desperate, and then they were in the final minute. And it was being counted down.

"If this ends in a tie," a commentator said, "we will have two fifteen minute overtimes played in their entirety. And if it is still a tie after that, it will be decided by alternating free kicks."

With just ten seconds remaining, one of the Italian players dribbled the ball down toward the Australian goal, which was very well defended. He had no chance for a shot. But he did draw the attention of one of these hotshot substitute Aussies who ran in front of him and threw himself on the ground to block the ball.

Now there were five seconds left. And the Italian, in an absolutely brilliant move, lobbed the ball softly over the prostrate defender and then instead of leaping over the Aussie himself, allowed his feet to crash into him. He was being TRIPPED. And he fell to the ground, over the Aussie, and grabbed at his ankle, writhing in "pain." And the referee bought it. It was a flagrant foul. The Aussie shouldn't have done that.

"Penalty kick," the ref called.

The stadium went absolutely mad. They lined up, the ball was placed in front of the goal, the goaltender placed himself in front of it ready to leap one way or the other, and the Italian faked one way and then shot it in the other way for the win.

Italy 1, Australia 0. It was over.

What can I say? I'm hooked. Now maybe you are too.

brakes as the ferry docks. I will not laugh when they lock their cars on the ferry to walk to the railing. I will not, I will not, I will not.

15. I will not run over any more designer bags that have been set down in the path from the ferry line to the ferry as tourists wait right in front of the ferry for pick up.

16. I will not cut the ropes and cast adrift tourist boats that moor at night, although Mystic is just beautiful this time of year and I know they'd love it...

17. I will not ask what all the initials mean on all their clothing, handbags, glasses, scarves, totes, luggage, et. al. I actually know what all the initials mean, I just take a perverse delight in their displeasure that they paid an exorbitant price for an item that's not impressing everyone they meet. For the money paid for some of these designer initials, they should be recognized on Mars...

18. Last, but not least, I will not pretend to speak a foreign language if I don't want to answer their questions.

It's gonna be a tough season for me....

JESUS FOR JEWS

An interesting concept but not new.

After all, Jesus was born to a Jewish mother, in a Jewish land and spent all of his earthly life relating to other Jews. Even his critics had no trouble believing he was for the Jewish people.

Even his claim to be the Messiah showed how for the Jewish people he was. You see, the Messianic concept is one right out of the Jewish Scriptures.

And our people were waiting for Messiah to arrive. It's just that he didn't come in the way that they expected. No regal robes. No white horse. No army of angels. He didn't look very "messianic" according to the notions of his day.

But Jesus isn't the Messiah of our imaginings. God is always doing the unexpected.

Like causing the sun to stand still. Or parting a sea in half. Or using one small clan, the Jewish people, to bring the message of the one true God to the rest of the world.

Yes, God is full of surprises.

Like sending a Messiah who would NOT attract followers. One of the prophecies of the Messiah was that physically "there is no beauty that we should desire him" (Isaiah 53:2).

You see, he didn't want people to be for him because he was handsome, majestic or politically powerful.

He didn't want people to be for him because he rubbed shoulders with the religious councils, governing bodies or power brokers of his day. Instead, he first appeared to humble people—shepherds.

At first the leaders were offended because he didn't look to them for support. But his manner, his miracles, his message were all the endorsement he needed.

He encouraged the slaves and the servants to come to him so that he would give them rest. He had time to listen to little children. He offered a rich young ruler the way to riches more precious than gold. And he treated women as equally worthy of his message of new life.

And to those with troubled hearts—whether they were rich or poor, male or female, young or old—he promised a peace that passes all human understanding.

Jesus was and is for all people.

And most certainly he is for Jews. You see, he's so for us that he wants us to have a joy, peace and a restored relationship with our Creator that will last for an eternity. What gets in the way of this full and healthy life is the human condition we all share—sin. A condition that has us filled with pride and all that flows from it.

Yet he can make it possible for us to have changed hearts, changed minds and a changed will. It's that simple. Jesus came to live among us, die and be raised from the dead, in order to cleanse us from sin and give us a right relationship with God.

The Jewish prophets understood.

Moses wrote about his coming (Deuteronomy 18:18).

Micah predicted his birth (Micah 5:2).

Isaiah described how he would die for our sins (Isaiah 53).

And King David wrote that he would not stay dead (Psalm 16:10).

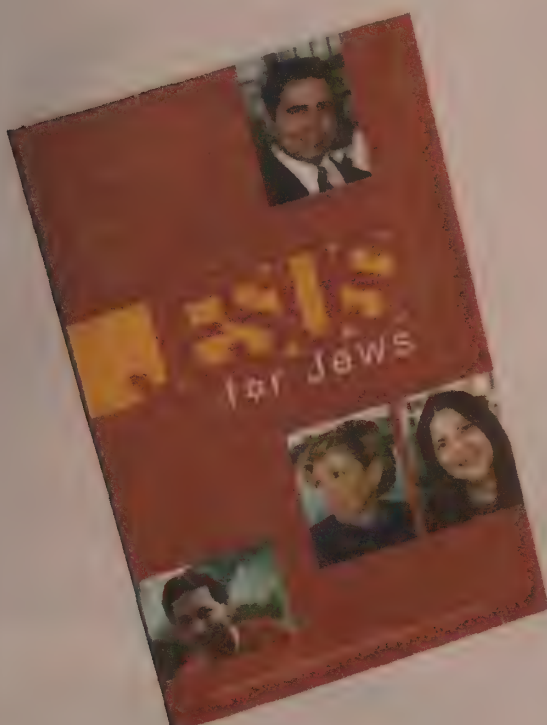

They would tell you that Jesus is who he claims to be. They would tell you that a lot of people got it wrong. They would tell you that the most Jewish thing you can do is believe in Jesus as Messiah. But you need to see for yourself what is true.

There are Jews today who know Jesus is for Jews and who want to tell you why they are for him.

They come from different places (Boston, New York, Chicago and Israel). They had different religious experiences (observant, agnostic and in-between). Yes, their life situations varied, but Shlomy, Karol, Susan and Stephen have this in common: they are proud to be Jews and they were willing to find out if Jesus was the Messiah, even if it meant the disapproval of the people they love most.

Want to hear their stories?

We've put them into a book, Jesus for Jews. And we'd like to send it to you, free. If you are willing to discover the love, joy and peace they have found in the Messiah, just fill out the coupon below.

Please send me your book Jesus for Jews. ☐ I am Jewish. ☐ I am Gentile. ☐ I'm already convinced.

filled the sky. Campers including Niya Guzman, Simone Rodriguez and Roy Lantigua were truly mesmerized as they sang along to the music. To volunteer your time or make a donation, log on to www.sfah.org.

Saturday afternoon, The Child Development Center of the Hamptons (CDCH) Junior Benefit Committee played host to a slew of young philanthropists at The Baker House 1650 in East Hampton, with owners Bob Rosen and his wife, Antonella Bertello, who is also a board member. The rest of the dedicated CDCH team, including Donna Colonna, Melissa Cohn and Megan Curren Schmidt, made sure the young attendees mingled around the pristine gardens and sparkling pool. While guests sipped cocktails, musician Mike Fredo performed live. A must attend event, The CDCH 10th Annual Summer Benefit, The Orchid Ball is Saturday, July 22nd. For tickets, log onto www.cdch.org for more information.

Saturday evening, Hamptons nightlife was in full swing, but the place to be was Pink Elephant. Command PRs Jonathan Cheban kicked off the holiday weekend with a party to celebrate the launch of his new fashion line, Kritik. The guest list was full of the bold and beautiful, but even Jonathan's team was pleasantly surprised at the celebrity turnout. Cheban's superstar protégé, Simon Huck answered the team phone at 12:30 a.m., and on the other line was Star Jones. "Al and I are on our way over." Seconds later, the team got a beep that Cheban wasn't even going to respond to, not knowing who it was, but luckily he called back. It happened to be Jessica Simpson's handler who revealed, "Jessica is on her way." The guest list just kept on growing, and turned into a powerful mix of young Hollywood from Zac Braff, Angie Everheart to Adriana Lima.

The Cain Estate was also a celebrity destination of choice this past holiday weekend. Sunday afternoon, the super-gorgeous, talented star Kelly Ripa didn't have to travel far to co-host a holiday cocktail soiree at the estate, which is just a hop skip and a jump from her home. And on Monday, Patrick McMullan co-hosted a BBQ for Eric and Kimberly Villency, complete with Rocco DiSpirito manning the grill.

This Saturday, Sunset Beach restaurant on Shelter Island is the place to be for a star-studded soiree, Dance at Sunset, to benefit ACRIA. Deborah Harry will be performing live. Log onto www.Acria.org for more info.

jointly by Mr. Rattiner and Leif Neubauer. Leif grew up in Westhampton and is one of the best surfers on eastern Long Island. He is also the web techie at half a dozen establishments on the East End. And he is married, has two small children, and loves to surf at Ditch, the Association, Mecox and Georgica, so every day you'll find him either in the ocean, looking at somebody's computer, at home with his family, or all three. He owns a retail store where he sells art and statuary he brought back from one of his surfing expeditions from the island of Bali. The store, in Southampton, is called Taman Batu.

David Lion Rattiner was born and raised in East Hampton and is a recent graduate of Northeastern University where he got a degree in Finance and was a member of the University crew team. Earlier, at East Hampton High School, he quarterbacked for the football team and ran track. This past spring he coached the women's crew team at Stony Brook University. Currently a resident of Montauk (just a hundred yards from Ditch Plains Beach), he works at Dan's Papers where he edits the North Fork section and the Montauk Pioneer.

This is not the first website effort for Mr. Rattiner. Earlier on, he developed watercooler-break.com, a site with some similarities to Myspace.com except the members were expected to be workers at large companies. It didn't work out, largely for technical reasons.

"I've learned from my past mistakes," David says.

As for datehampton.com, he had this to say. "Datehampton.com has been up for three weeks. We've had a lot of people going out on dates, a lot of e-mails and a lot of compliments. Currently we have more than a hundred users. Most are between the ages of 20 and 30, but a few are up to 50. I'm excited about our prospects."

David and Leif have rights not only to datehampton.com, but also datenewyorkcity.com, datespen.com, datesanfran.com, datewdc.com (in Washington), matchlondon.com, Italianmate.com and citalatinos.com.

The future, as it always does, lies ahead. See you at the Talkhouse on July 8.

July (continued from page 28)

William Frankenbach would have to drive themselves to Islip for a hearing, scheduled for 2 pm, July 3 so the Judge could hear the case.

Instead, the hearing never happened. Over the weekend, a Stipulated Order was signed by all of the above, together with James Henry Esq. for the plaintiffs.

"The parties to the above entitled action have agreed to the form of an Order, submitted herewith, that would in the parties' view, obviate the need for the hearing scheduled today in Federal Court at 2 pm, July 3, 2006," the preamble read.

STIPULATED ORDER

Upon agreement of the parties, the Court enters the following Order: The Plaintiffs shall be permitted to march and freely engage in political speech at the July 4th Parade to be held on July 4th, 2006, in the Village of Southampton, New York.

And so ended Civil Action No. CV-06 3252.

The following day, the parade was held. There were fire engines, antique cars, marching bands, veterans, soldiers in uniform, politicians, police motorcycles, ambulances, floats and about sixty people holding signs expressing opposing views to those held by the current government. Their signs, flouting Mr. Frankenbach's order, and supporting the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the First and Fourteenth Amendments guaranteeing the freedom to peaceably assemble and the freedom to enjoy freedom of speech included those as follows: WAR IS NOT THE ANSWER, NEVER TAKE OUR FREEDOM FOR GRANTED, I AM A FISCAL CONSERVATIVE STOP THE IRAQ WAR NOW!! EAST END VETS SAY BRING THEM HOME, END TORTURE CLOSE DOWN GUANTANAMO, STOP CUTS IN VETERANS' BENEFITS, LET THE SUN SET ON THE PATRIOT ACT! and DEFEND OUR BILL OF RIGHTS.

There were, of course, also signs that read PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN, SUPPORT OUR TROOPS, AND WE SUPPORT BUSH. Everyone had their say.

At the present time, Mr. James is continuing a further action, a permanent injunction, so that the Village of Southampton will never again be permitted, however well intentioned, to curtail citizen's inalienable rights.

* * *

About twenty years ago, a very famous parade wound its way through the streets of Charleston, South Carolina.

At the time, there was a very respected black man serving as the Chief of Police of that community. One day, the Mayor invited him into a meeting of the City Council.

"Chief," the Mayor said, "we have before us an application from the Ku Klux Klan for a permit to parade through downtown one month from today. We can approve it or reject it. But there is the matter of freedom of speech. We wondered what you think we ought to do?"

The Chief did not hesitate. "Approve it. And I shall lead it so these folks will not suffer any harm."

And so they approved it, and the Chief did that and the KKK made it through.

nodding, glassy eyed, saying that he'd figure it out, just give him some good men.

Eventually, after a bad start to the season, Coach Brown began to bad mouth some of his players in order to get them so pissed off they'd play better. But in the end, the whole season was a dismal failure. The team played 82 games, but only won 23. The Knicks finished last. And they finished with the second worst record in the history of the game.

At the present time, Larry Brown is spending the summer at his home in East Hampton, having just come through one of the worst experiences of his life, beginning with his decision to coach the Knicks. James Dolan sided with Isiah Thomas in nearly all of the player selections. And when Thomas complained to Dolan that Brown was berating the players in the media, Dolan fired Brown. Now Brown was left with $40 million unpaid of his $50 million contract. And Dolan was now saying he did not live up to the contract and so nothing was now owed. Try and get the $40 million. Needless to say this will go to court.

As for the future, it is very interesting. James Dolan sat at a table two weeks ago and said that his new coach of the Knicks would be.....Isiah Thomas, who was sitting right next to him, smiling.

"Thomas made this bed, and so now he's got to sleep in it," Dolan said, referring to the fact that all the new hires came from Thomas, not Brown. "Let's see what he can do. If by this time next year the team is still going nowhere; he won't be sitting here next to me. He'll be gone."

Somewhere in here, deep down, James Dolan has rediscovered his roots. He's a cable TV man. And we all know what the most successful TV shows are. They are the "Survivor" shows, and the "American Idol" shows. By accident, it seems, James Dolan has set up a situation which will get all sports fans watching to see what is going to happen to Isiah Thomas. And that will pack people into the Garden.

One third the way into next season, Isiah Thomas, with the sorry excuses for basketball players he has hired, will have once again been slaughtered by the Miami Heat.

The fans are walking out of the Garden. The Knicks have won 3 and lost 22, the three wins coming when one opponent had an accident with the bus which injured three of their starters, the second came in late thus missing the first quarter, and the third all had stomach viruses.

"I really thought this night was going to be it," one of the fans says, shoving his hands in his pockets. He is referring to the Hook.

About five games earlier, James Dolan had caused to be constructed a large ten foot wooden hook covered in spangled white satin to be displayed along the sidelines by workmen. With the game 55 to 12 in favor of the opponent, the fans started shouting and hooting and pointing thumbs down at Dolan up in his President's box. But the workmen do not pick up the hook.

They do seem to be going for the hook when the game is 106 to 44, but then they put it down. No hook tonight. See if it happens tomorrow.

In "Survivor," the participants are voted off, on "American Idol" some judges make the decision. Back in the early days of television, an applause meter would react to the studio audience and let the performer on Amateur Hour know when he was through, and before that there was the hook. It was an old vaudeville tradition.

The man in tie and tux would be stumbling through a bad tap-dance rendition of "Tea for Two" and when the producer had enough, the hook would appear from offstage and grab the performer around the waist and simply drag him off to the boos of the theatre audience. That's show business.

This July, Hebrew-Christian groups such as Jews for Jesus will work to convert Jews to another religion.

In response, New York's diverse Jewish community says in one voice...

"Yes" to Judaism

This month, and every month, make your Jewish practice stronger and more meaningful

- Learn Torah—and more about Judaism
- Have a Shabbat meal—with family and friends
- Do Tikun Olam—find a way to make the world a better place
- Light Shabbat candles—and bless your children
- Give Tzedaka (Charity)—help those in need
- Pray to the One God of All Humanity—and connect with a synagogue

For every step you take—invite somebody to join you

Everyone gets very excited when a great new restaurant comes to town. You should feel the same about a bank.

Especially if it's Hudson City Savings Bank. Founded in 1868, we're New Jersey's largest savings bank and one of the largest in the country with nearly $30 billion in assets. On July 10th we'll be opening our new branch in Westhampton Beach.

What sets us apart from other banks is our extraordinarily great rates. For example, we have some of the highest rates on Long Island for Certificates of Deposit as well as our High Value Checking, which actually pays you interest on your checking account balance. You'll also find we have the most competitive mortgage rates around with a variety of plans to meet your needs.

Stop by our new Westhampton Beach branch. We'd like to show you why New Jersey's best savings bank is also one of Long Island's. Hudson City Savings Bank. We make the most sense for your dollars.

RED CARPET ARRIVALS

Oprah Winfrey, the producer of the musical The Color Purple, and film star Julia Roberts, who made her Broadway debut in Three Days of Rain, brought high voltage star power to the 2006 Tony Awards. Throngs of people lined the streets outside Radio City Musical Hall to catch a glimpse of two of the world's most powerful superstars, who were expected to join a galaxy of Broadway stars to walk the Red Carpet at the 60th Annual Celebration. Unfortunatley Julia did not appear saving herself instead for her presentation chores inside the Music Hall. The galaxy glittered beautifully without her and Oprah was a delight.

CORRECTION

In the June 30 issue of Dan's Papers, an article titled "Peking Duck, Meet Pinot Noir" incorrectly referred to the 2003 Lenz Gewurztraminer. The line should have read, "The lychee nose of the wine is delightful with the mildly spicy poultry, even though the finish cannot compete with the 2002 vintage, which was a real standout."

Splish Splash Is An Absolute Blast

The Water Park In Riverhead Has Amazing History And A Fun New Ride

By Thomas Sarc

Calling all thrill seekers! Prepare to be dunked, dipped, splashed and totally soaked at the water park that the Travel Channel rated number one in the Tri-State area and one of the top five in the United States...SPLISH SPLASH! From hanging out with friends to family events or corporate outings, Splish Splash has something fun for everyone all right in Riverhead.

Back in 1989, a gentleman named Chip Cleary had a dream to build a themed water park on Long Island. So, on a hot day in May of 1991, a vast East End farmland water park called Splish Splash debuted. The 32 acre water park, which originally contained two tube slides, three body slides, a family raft ride, two speed slides, a 1300 foot "lazy river," two kiddie pools and a restaurant welcomed its first guests. The first visitors were immediately delighted and fascinated by the thrilling rides and the magical atmosphere of the park.

Splish Splash proved to be a phenomenal success and it extended into its second year of operation. In 1992, Splish Splash introduced "The Abyss" – an enclosed, twisting tube ride. They also added a gigantic elephant pool and slide in Kiddie Cove. In 1993, the "Barrier Reef" was born. This JAWS themed ride enticed riders with the scary JAWS music and super speed down an enclosed slide. 1994 saw the construction of "Shotgun Falls." This western themed slide takes riders down a short, fast slide where they are dropped 10 feet into a pool. Shotgun Falls quickly became a park favorite.

In 1995, during its fifth year of operation, Splish

Splash unveiled a 20,000 square foot wave pool, which had giant waves for the guests to enjoy. This is a popular area for children and adults because the children could enjoy the pool while the adults relaxed on the beach. In 1996, a ride was introduced for really big thrill seekers called The "Cliff Diver." This is an 80-foot tall speed slide that is so fast and steep that I almost lost my lunch when I went on it! But it was FUN!!!! Those who accept the challenge plummet down the slide at such a high speed that it is over in a blink of an eye. Guests wait at the bottom, cheering the ones who took the challenge.

In 1997, Splish Splash added a tram system and new parking area. This system allowed for more guest parking and the convenience of a tram to get them from their cars to the park.

In 2002, they built one of its most spectacular rides to date, the "Hollywood Stunt Rider." This is a Hollywood themed enclosed family ride, complete with a show for guests to enjoy while waiting on line.

In 2004, "Dragon's Den" was opened with outstanding reviews. This is a breathtaking answer to those on a quest for maximum thrills. On this ride, you will catapult through mysterious darkness and then plummet into the mist-shrouded abyss of the dragon...only to vanish from sight. This, in my opinion, is a must see attraction.

This year, space aliens have invaded the back of the park. Witnesses are refusing to comment but beware, they are coming. "Alien Invasion," a ride that will send chills through your bones, is already a park favorite.

Water rides are not the only attraction at this amazing water park. The Parrots of the Caribbean Tropical Bird show is a fun filled performance with wacky and hysterically funny trained parrots.

Some amazing facts about Long Island Splish Splash they employed team members from 9 different countries last year, they have hosted over 5 million guests since it opened and 10,000 pounds of hamburger and 64,000 slices of pizza were served in 2005.

So, it's hot and humid and you are looking for something to do other than the same old pool or beach? That's why Splish Splash was created – for you and your family to enjoy. And if you are not from Long Island, or plan to make an extended stay, there are many area hotels including Best Western and Holiday Inn in Riverhead.

Getting to Splish Splash is easy – from NYC, Nassau or Western Suffolk take the Long Island Expressway to exit 72 west. Take the west ramp and turn left at the first light into Splish Splash Drive. If you are coming from the Hamptons and points east, take Sunrise Highway westbound to Route 24 North to the traffic circle. Follow the signs for Main Street or Route 25 West. Cross over the Long Island Expressway and turn left at the first traffic light, which is Splish Splash Drive.

It's awesome. Check it out.

A Solution To The Deer Problem

Here's What We Can Do About The Many Deer On The North Fork

Do you know Janeth Wanzor? If you do, I think you'll agree she's a compassionate person. Born before World War II (a delicate way of saying she's no kid), Janeth has a couple of green thumbs. Her Southold garden gifts us with daylilies, hydrangea, petunias, and so many other pretty things, including deer. There's the rub.

For our Empire State has its fair share of deer – almost a million according to the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation. And those deer are responsible for over $58 million worth of crop damage in New York each year.

According to Janeth, most of those million deer assemble early in her yard, ready to eat their way through each day. If that's accurate, then I understand Janeth's plea for help. What she proposes is good-natured enough. Why not, she asks, just gather all the deer on the North Fork and "ship them to the Adirondacks?"

Let's see now. The first problem appears to be logistics. If, and it's a big if, all the North Fork deer are on her property, then we're off to a good start. But what next? Put the deer on trucks and ship them upstate via the Cross Sound ferry? No, we've got enough problems with that crowd already.

Well, how about tractor-trailer them on the LIE, the Cross Bronx Expressway and then on up to the Northway? I envision the deer being bid a cheering farewell by thousands, maybe millions, of southern-tier New Yorkers lining the roadways, stopping traffic. They'll be protesters, too. And I can hear them shouting, "Hell no, they can't go." This will never do. It'll tie up the whole darn state. There's gotta be another way.

We could herd them into New York City, load them on boats, and ship 'em up the Hudson. Oh, dear! Do deer get seasick? That's a messy idea I'd better discard right now.

SUNDAY, JULY 9

BLUES FESTIVAL- This is the one you don't want to miss. From July 8-9 go to the Annual Riverhead Blues Festival sponsored by the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall featuring 36 acts at the Peconic River parking field. Music starts at 11 a.m. on Saturday and noon on Sunday. Donation: $5. Call

And what about the cost? Several states have attempted to relocate their deer population. In Wisconsin, capture costs came to $412 per deer. It was even worse in California. There the capture cost was as high as $800 for each deer. Is the North Fork ready for such an expense? Is that what they mean when they say the price is too dear? (Sorry – hard to resist.)

But wait. We're traveling too fast. We haven't even checked out this scheme with the folks in the North Country. Do they want our deer? Need our deer? We better look into this.

In the interest of a good north-south relationship, I made a few phone calls. The first was to Martha Denio at the tourist center in Old Forge in the western Adirondacks. Ms. Denio and I spoke for a little while about early days in that area (my memories of Old Forge go back to the '40s). Then on to the deer.

"Oh, no, please. We have enough of our own," said Ms. Denio. Apparently the deer walk the streets of Old Forge in groups of three or four, much as tourists do. "They eat every flower in town," she continued.

And then, the crusher. It seems Adirondack deer are not tick carriers as are North Fork deer. Nor do their deer suffer from some diseases our deer are subject to. While Ms. Denio's tone remained cordial, I could tell North Fork deer would not be welcomed in Old Forge. A kind of deer NIMBYism.

So I called John Kopp, executive director of the Tupper Lake Chamber of Commerce. Guess what? He doesn't want our deer either. Mr. Kopp explained that as winters seem to be gradually warming, the deer herds are increasing. Moreover, farmland is disappearing in the Tupper Lake region (so what else is new?) and as a result the deer come ever closer to town. Kopp did mention, however, that there is less ornamental shrubbery in the Adirondacks than on Long Island. Thus there is less financial loss to homeowners. Indeed, some Tupper Lake residents even feed the deer.

I made one more call. At Long Lake, the Department of Parks put me through to Theresa Taylor who said there is little farmland in her area (few people, too – only 750 in winter), and the deer don't pose a major problem. True, they browse the forest and occasionally nibble away in a garden. You know, I got the feeling from Ms. Taylor that Long Lake might be journey's end for our deer.

In order to facilitate the exportation of North Fork deer to the Adirondacks, I suggest Southold's Scott Russell to lead the NFTA committee (not to be confused with NAFTA) with Janeth Wanzor as chair. This North Fork to Adirondacks group would study the feasibility of the deer lift and determine its cost. Then we make our final pitch to Long Lake.

In case the pot needs sweetening, here's what we can do. We'll set up an exchange program. If Long Lake will take all our North Fork deer, then we'll take their cute, little Adirondack black bears.

—Phyllis Lombardi

THE BARREL...

with Lenn Thompson

An Open Letter to the Wine Spectator
Dear Wine Spectator,

Thank you for covering New York wines in your May 31 issue. As someone who loves New York — and specifically Long Island — wines, I was glad to see you bringing these wines to your readers.

But I would like to inquire about your scoring of these wines and your “blind tasting” practices. No, I’m not here to accuse you of scoring advertisers’ wines higher than non-advertisers’ wines. For one, there isn’t any evidence of such a thing. Besides, I don’t believe that has any bearing on the scores you gave New York wines because, at least as far as I know, none of them advertise in your pages.

Blind tasting — that is, tasting wines without knowing what producer made the wine — is obviously the way to go and is an industry standard. Any wine reviewer has his or her favorite wineries (no matter how hard we try not to), and a bias is bound to arise from such favoritism. Whenever possible, I taste wines blind against the same variety, or similar blends, if necessary. Of course, I don’t always have the time or resources to blind-taste every last wine I review. But time and resources probably aren’t as big an issue for a publication like yours.

If I’m not mistaken, however, you do let reviewers/tasters know the region (and I believe vintage year) of the wines in front of them. On the surface, this isn’t problematic. After all, I know that most of the wines I taste and review are from New York — that’s my focus. But I don’t have any sort of negative bias against New York wines. I can’t help but wonder if your reviewers can say the same.

Because it’s such a young and still-developing wine region, New York isn’t one that you focus on. So I imagine that the people who review New York wines for you focus much of their time tasting wines from Bordeaux, Burgundy, California, etc. So these tasters are used to sitting down with many wines in front of them — all poured ahead of time so that they have no idea who made them.

But then you tell them that the wines were made in New York. Maybe they roll their eyes or maybe they don’t — but their frame of reference certainly shifts away from their usual wine “beat” and maybe — just maybe — a taster or two has a negative opinion of New York wines based on plonk they tasted years ago.

I think that the scores New York wines received in your May 31 issue may reflect some level of pre-determined disdain. But before you label me as a New York wine whiner, consider this:

In that same issue (and previously), you proclaimed Finger Lakes Rieslings to be among the best in the United States. And yet the highest scoring wine made with my favorite white-wine grape was the 89 points given to Atwater Estate (a delicious Riesling, by the way).

On Long Island, the highest scoring wines were a Cabernet Sauvignon from Raphael, a Chardonnay from Macari Vineyards and a Late Harvest Chardonnay from Wolfer. All wines that I happen to enjoy...but where’s the Merlot? I’m not completely in favor of producers pushing Long Island as a Merlot region, but fact is that many of its best wines are Merlots.

I have asked you previously why wines from such well-respected Long Island producers as Lenz Winery, Lieb Cellars and Channing Daughters Winery (among others), were excluded from your scores. Were they intentionally excluded from the tasting or did they just fail to send samples? If a tasting reflects only those who send samples, can it really be considered comprehensive? Can its results be considered a true indicator of the overall quality a region produces?

Who am I to question the WS tasting procedures? I’m someone who just doesn’t understand the need to disclose to tasters what region they are tasting. My guess is that some of the better New York Merlots and red blends could be (and probably have been) mistaken for Bordeaux wines, and that the best Chardonnays would compare well to white Burgundies.

So are “blind” tastings really blind if the tasters are told where the wines come from? Or would it be more accurate to call them “vision-impaired”? Here’s a penny, and maybe even a bottle of Lenz “Old Vines” Merlot, for your thoughts.

Sincerely,
Lenn Thompson

Cauliflower Camp

Wine Camp Is A Blast, But Cauliflower Camp Could Knock Your Socks Off

By Phyllis Lombardi

Wine Camp. It's the talk of the North Fork. How in just a year the camps have taken off like vines in the East End sun. Five camp sessions a year are designed and presented by several B&Bs and area vineyards.

And they are gold mine successful. With only a score of campers in each session, there's plenty of upfront observation and participation. Campers learn the wine history of our region, spend time with wine-makers, discover the challenges of vineyard management and develop the techniques of wine tasting. Campers eat well, too. Breakfasts at their B&Bs, lunches in a vineyard, dinners at North Fork restaurants.

So call this sour grapes if you wish. But I'm just not cut out for all that wine sniffing, swirling, spitting. I need another kind of camp, one synonymous with the old North Fork. That's right. I'm on the prowl for a Cauliflower Camp. True, I'd never heard of such a camp. But that doesn't mean much. There's a lot I haven't heard of. So I asked around.

My friends couldn't help. Nor could the folks at the Long Island Cauliflower Association in Riverhead. And there I was, packed for Cauliflower Camp with no place to go.

What to do? Establish my own camp, of course. If these grape people can do it, why can't I? First I'd find a cauliflower farmer who'd partner with me. I could ask Johnny Doroski down on Pequash Avenue here in Cutchogue or go to Farmer Mike's a couple of miles away on Main Road. Johnny or Farmer Mike could provide farmland and practical experience while I prepared the program including meals, sleeping arrangements and classes.

I'd model my Cauliflower Camp on Wine Camp's program. That means three or four days of doing stuff, starting with B&B breakfasts. There'd be baked eggs and cauliflower, cauliflower fritters, cauliflower muffins. The coffee I'd leave alone. My husband says it's bad enough as it is.

After breakfast it's the cauliflower fields for hands-on experience. We'll do a little fertilizing (nitrogen), cultivating, mulching and harvesting in season. And yes, we'll talk rotation, irrigation, marketing, and control of diseases and pests (downy mildew and cabbage root fly). In the fields we'll enjoy the frisky companionship of the camp's mascot, our collie, Flower.

Now let's knock off for lunch. We'll eat right in the fields, al fresco. That's wine talk but cauliflower people can use those words, too. The menu? Cream of cauliflower soup and crisp cauliflower salad with grape tomatoes and bacon. Dessert is a non-cauliflower treat. Ice cream from Mattituck's Magic Fountain as we drive to classes at the Cauliflower Association on Marcy Avenue in Riverhead.

Here, some campers will paint cauliflower, capture its purple, green or creamy white in oils. Others will attend the creative cauliflower writing class. For inspiration, no less an author than Doris Lessing who writes of "rich chocolate earth, studded with emerald green frothed with the white of cauliflower."

Then, the cauliflower crafts class. While wine people paint grapes on glasses, sew wine tote bags and glue corks on picture frames, cauliflower people produce dried cauliflower bouquets, shrink and shrivel (oven on high) large cauliflower heads and sell them to voodoo shops in New Orleans. And we'll make cauliflower tote bags, big, bulky, burlap, for cauliflower heads that may weigh more than 50 pounds.

Dinner is preceded by cauliflower tasting. We'll stand around and talk aroma, blend, and palate. Just like our wine cousins. Then we'll eat baked seafood cauliflower casserole, cauliflower soufflé, or pasta with roasted cauliflower.

After dinner, there's cauliflower culture class. It was Mark Twain who said, "Cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education." Note Twain makes no mention of grapes when discussing higher education. Campers will learn the word cauliflower comes from Latin cauli (stalk) and floris (flower). And that cauliflower is of the species Brassica Oleracea. By this time all campers are nodding off. They're ready to return to their B&Bs – but not before some good news.

Wine campers, after a day of tasting, might be in no condition to drive. But you can taste as much as you wish at my camp and never be pulled over for driving under the influence of cauliflower. You may have intestinal problems but not so bad a North Fork police officer would notice.

Well, that's it. Pack your jeans, knife and fork, a towel and a trowel, and head on out. Just follow the signs. Welcome to Cauliflower Country.

Dan's North Fork

The drive down from Route 24 to New Suffolk is a drive still so typical of the North Fork. You seem to be going back in time to a less stressed, less populated era. When you finally reach the waters of Peconic Bay, the illusion deepens in this hamlet of boats and fishermen. At Legends just find a space on the surrounding roads and stroll to this charmingly unpretentious restaurant (or come by boat as many do). Now, because it is called 'Legends' and has a fascinating array of sporting memorabilia, don't be fooled. This is not a sports bar but somewhere where fine dining is offered by Executive Chef Michael Reilly, a graduate of the Culinary Institute and former executive chef at Sappore Di Mare. He is now in his seventh year here and his right hand man, Sous-Chef Ralph Foulkes, have one heck of a menu.

There are two dining rooms, one more informal where the bar dispenses over 200 varieties of beers and there are loads of TV sets to watch sporting events. The other is charming, well appointed and more formal, without being stuffy. It is a very comfortable place to relax and enjoy your meal

Legends is owned by Diane and Dennis Harkoff and Diane, who mixes warmth and charm with a very dry sense of humor (look out for her book on restaurant experiences, when she finds time to write it), is the guiding force behind the restaurant. Mike is a chef who loves variety, and this shows in his very eclectic menu where pan-Asian influences, like Pad Thai, rub elbows with classic Italian dishes such as Caciucco, the famed seafood stew of Tuscany and baby back ribs and a tasting menu selected for us from their new revamped menu.

After tasting some of the best crab cakes for many a meal - these were panko crusted and accented by ginger, garlic and lemongrass Asian style we moved on to a Napoleon of exquisitely fresh chopped raw tuna in a miso-ginger vinaigrette, layered with sesame seaweed between crispy wontons and accompanied by sliced avocado and wasabi cream. This was a dish that not only was so pleasing to the eye but also was an incredible blend of tastes and we both rated this as one of our best ever appetizers. This really is a signature dish to be proud of and is strongly recommended. Mussels in a white wine sauce were plump, tasty and redolent of garlic, and went very well with the basket of Tomcat Bakery bread. Thai shrimp and sausage sautéed with a blend of herbs and spices and served in a crispy shell was good if a little dry. It had a good level of heat but Jackie, our charming and extremely knowledgeable and helpful waitress, explained that many of their regulars do like this dish to have a kick to it.

Mediterranean salad is a real fusion with sun dried tomatoes, artichoke hearts and celery blending with edamame beans and toasted soy nuts among others to produce a very tasty and healthy salad perfectly dressed with a simple vinaigrette.

It is always fun to come across something new and for us it was Escolar, a white fish that Diane explained comes from warm waters such as the Gulf or from Hawaii. It proved to be a very meaty textured fish, reminiscent of swordfish but with a very delicate taste similar to flounder. I am a devoted pie lover so I also had to taste Mike's seafood pie, described as containing shrimp, scallops, langoustines and other fish in a sherry scented lobster sauce with a puff pastry top. It was to die for - sea food pie is not at all easy to blend for often one ingredient can overwhelm the others but not in this one.

The fish were all perfectly cooked and the sauce was decadently rich. It fully deserves its listing on the menu as 'Legendary' and is another great signature dish! We finally managed to taste a morsel of a delicious horseradish crusted filet mignon that came with a gruyere potato cake reminiscent of the best Swiss rosti - a delight for all potato and cheese lovers.

We finished our delightful meal with another Napoleon, this one of fried phyllo pastry interspersed with fresh Chambord marinated berries and Grand Marnier cream.

Appetizers are from $8 to $11; Main courses from $15 to $29. They have a good wine list at sensible prices, largely based on Long Island wines. By the glass they start at $6 and bottles are from $26.

Lunch and dinner are served every day year round and this is a great place to eat for either casual or special occasions. Everything we ate was true to taste, well cooked and beautifully presented and it is easy to see how 'Legends' has become a legend in its own right over the past 13 years. They have instituted a reservation system for the first time this year, so call ahead, especially at peak times.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

What kind of car would Keyser Soze drive? Let's face it, he was a sinister guy, and if I were car casting for his ride, the vehicle I imagine he would covet would certainly have to be mysterious looking and probably black in color. The one car that immediately comes to mind is a one-off show car that was built, I believe, in the fifties, called the Phantom Corsair. The Phantom Corsair was a truly beautiful and swoopy piece of automotive architecture, and yes, it was black. It looked like a cross between James Dean's black '49 Mercury coupe, from Rebel Without a Cause and a SR71 Blackbird supersonic fighter plane.

While I'm on the subject of those old '49 to '51 Mercury coupes, they were really something to look at. Their streamlined looks have certainly stood the test of time. They are as impressive today as they were at their introduction in 1949. In fact, I'll stick my neck out and say that design period of Mercury coupe and convertible probably produced the most desirable of the Mercury automobiles. The coupes were especially mean looking. Perhaps that's why James Dean, who as we know was a car guy, chose one as his set of wheels for Rebel. In fact, several years later, Sly Stallone's star car in the film Cobra was also a 49 Mercury coupe. Coincidentally, both cars used for these films were black.

Speaking of black, and sinister, what about the Batmobile? This thing makes the Phantom Corsair look wimpy, but it's a little over the top. To be fair, it was really designed by Hollywood creative types to impress kids of all ages and probably to spin off thousands of toy model look-a-likes. The original Batmobile, designed and built by George Barris for the fifties television series, the newer one built for the original Batman and the third one that I believe was a digital creation, were all quite visually impressive, and sinisterly batty. The last Batman car was a visual failure. It was a hot rod SUV that, for all practical purposes, could have been the superhero's ride in another comic book, GI Joe.

I had a Porsche Speedster in 1955, which, coincidentally, was black. To tell you the truth, with the top down, it looked like a dirty bathtub. But put that long narrow top up and pop those slender side curtains into the doors and the car completely changed character. Visually, it morphed from a smiley face bathtub kind of look to a hunkered down junkyard dog foaming at the mouth. If Keyser Soze were to drive a sports car, this would be it. The Speedster was originally designed as a cabriolet, with a full height windshield and a substantial fabric lined top. Porsche needed an entry level, less expensive car for the American market, so they replaced the substantial padded top from their current production cabriolet with a lesser top, removed the wind-up windows and chopped about five inches from the windshield, lowering everything above the car's belt line. Of course, the Kustom car guys in California had been chopping tops on hot rods for years but I'm sure this new sinister-looking diminutive Porsche shocked most conservative German auto enthusiasts.

Speaking of narrow side windows, which are actually one of the Speedsters trademarks, those slitty side windows seem to connote visual mystery. Run to your automobile book collection and research most of the Bentley four door sedans of the thirties. They all had long hoods and narrow windows. What were they trying to hide behind that glass, British train robbers or Nazi spies? What about the Chicago gangsters of the twenties? They were always pictured in either four-door convertibles, usually with their tops raised, or Packard sedans, again all with narrow side windows. Why, so the goons could hide their Thompson sub machine guns?

Today, virtually every car the Chrysler Corporation makes has the potential to be a contemporary mystery car in the making. Already, I've seen several films where the new Chrysler 300 sedan, always painted black, has been car cast as the bad guys ride. It's almost as though we've gone back in time to the old "Miami Vice" TV series, where every druggie kingpin drove a Black Mercedes 500 Sedan. Well, now it's a Chrysler 300. My wife isn't thrilled with the new Chrysler station wagon with its chopped and channeled look. She says it looks hood, but I'm impressed that Chrysler had the guts to build such a bold, but arguably sinister-looking good-old family station wagon. Next time you see a black car with squinting side windows weaving through midtown traffic, give it a wide berth...Keyser Soze or Dick Cheney may be at the wheel.

DAN'S TRAVELS

book review: mantalk by elliot jacobs

The foreword of Mantalk, Elliot Jacob's new nonfiction book on the art of health and beauty for men, states "it is a common stereotype that men do not like asking for directions... men are tacticians." Perhaps it was my "tactic" anti-directions side – or just my cynical, skeptical self – that made me wary of a book with chapters titled "New Skin, New Man" and lengthy paragraphs on pec implants. But Mantalk, which sounds a lot like Montauk and I'm going to go out on a calf-implanted limb and guess that that's deliberate, quickly showed me that not only is the practice of man-beauty, so to speak, entirely valid, healthy, and interesting, it's in surprisingly high demand. Mantalk is the book men have been waiting for ever since Norelco came out with a men's razor whose ambiguous use is "bodygrooming." This book cuts through the ambiguity and makes "male grooming" understandable. Metrosexuality has spread to the masses, and this D.I.Y. (or with a good plastic surgeon) guide to man-grooming is the straight eye for the everyguy. So, men – let's talk.

The male grooming market has apparently been cited as an industry of $3.5 billion, according to Mantalk. While masculine vanity was once considered unmanly, it is now becoming something of a status symbol. Plus, it's just emotionally and physically healthy for a man to look and feel good. This is especially true for middle-aged men and baby-boomers, who have found that aging, while sometimes deeply gratifying, isn't always pretty. That's not to say that the modern man wants to be "pretty," but to look and feel good is very fulfilling for a man and his special somebody. With the nerve-wracking threat of heart disease and numerous forms of cancer – and the sometimes equally nerve-wracking threat of just being fat or unattractive – it is not just fun and fulfilling for a man to take care of himself, but important. All of this helps to explain why the market for men's beauty products – from the classics like razors and colognes to the exotic jaw implants – has increased dramatically over the past several years. That, and "Queer Eye."

Jacobs, a Mensa member and plastic surgeon in Manhattan who is also inexplicably licensed in The Bahamas, explains that as men age, their skin loses its firmness. At as early as thirty-five, the skin begins a slow descent downwards as it loses its battle with gravity. This process is greatly sped up by sun exposure and alcohol. You might forget what you did the night before, but your skin won't. By age 55, a man's skin can go from having had "acne and some loss of elasticity" (age 25-45) to "wrinkles, uneven color and pigmentation, sagging, sallowness, yellow color, and dark circles under the eye." This is a natural process but science and Jacobs are waging war on wrinkles. Avoiding wrinkles entirely is probably impossible, but consistent moisturizing can greatly help the health and appearance of skin. After that, Jacobs skips right to Botox, which he assures is safe and non-invasive. Your last resort for younger looking skin is the ever-efficient facelift, which Dr. Jacobs later explains has become substantially simpler, with the use of the Contour Threadlift™, which is a one hour process using many sharp bristles to make your face look youthful. But if you're not okay with "barbed" sutures making "tiny incisions..... like multiple mini-umbrellas" on your face, then I suggest you start moisturizing, men.

The term "neck lift" might sound daunting and just plain weird at first, but Jacobs assures that subtle surgery is an effective way to look younger and better. As gravity pushes skin to the Earth's core, and fat into weird parts of the body, many men are bothered by a "turkey gobble," the hanging fat that appears in the lower face and neck. A neck lift, sometimes with an additional chin implant, can enhance your jaw line and make your features finer. Other facial fun you can have is eyelid rejuvenation to look less tired or bloated, and a nose job to create a "strong, balanced facial profile that gives the impression of personal confidence." Personal confidence – or at least looking personally confident – has become immeasurably important in both the business world and dating, making this book a useful guide.

Filled with anecdotes about men who have successfully rejuvenated themselves, Mantalk is easy for anyone to read. Really, it is not just the "metrosexual" trend that is encouraging men to take care of themselves. From simple healthy lifestyle choices to luxurious, effective plastic surgeries, men should be taking an active interest in their physical looks and well-being for their own sake and health. However, the metrosexual trend should not be ignored with a laugh at Ryan Seacrest's expense – men taking their looks and health seriously is becoming something doctors, marketers, and employers are all taking seriously. At eighteen, I'm not a boy, not yet a man, but I will be taking several of Dr. Jacobs' health tips. As for pec implants, for now, I'll stick with push-ups. But the man on the cover of Mantalk looks healthy and sharp, with defined features, cool hair, and a glowing tan. If that's the future for me – and the future of older men – it's looking pretty bright.

Mantalk is published by MD Publish and is available on Amazon.com

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Sarnoff Preserve & Napeague Continued

Meandering in the Sarnoff Preserve would have been quite an adventure last week. Trails that had been cut back early this spring have all closed back up due to plentiful rains. In places the trail is grown over to the point where you couldn't find it if not for the painted blazes. That is, if the painted blazes are still there.....

On Friday, June 30, following up on an inquiry from a DEC Ranger, I parked at the NYS DEC trailhead on CR 104, two miles south of the Riverhead roundabout, and walked the Paumanok Path (PP) east to find that all of the white rectangular blazes had been spray-painted for about two miles. Heading back, I noted that this area needed some branch trimming; I was picking up a lot of ticks in the high grass. I noticed the aggressive tracks of a dirt bike. Out of curiosity I followed the dirt bike tracks back east along the PP to a trail with yellow plastic DEC blazes, then to the DEC blue loop trail where the tracks turned onto a woods road. I continued walking the two-mile loop trail (in need of trimming) and headed back to the PP. When I got to the parking area I saw the blazes had also been painted over going west on the PP, so I followed it for a mile. The trail was completely overgrown in places. All the blazes were camouflaged with multiple colors of spray-paint and the plastic PP emblems were torn down. When I reached the yellow trail that leads back to the parking area, I found all the blazes had been covered on this trail as well – another 1.5 miles of vandalized blazes.

What could possibly cause someone to do this? The Paumanok Path is a regional initiative. I receive e-mails from people in England and Australia who anticipate walking this trail when they visit Long Island. The NYS DEC, County Parks, State Parks, the Nature Conservancy, Peconic Land Trust, NYS Rivers and Trails, the Pine Barrens Commission, several municipalities, three trail groups, and several environmental groups have all been expending an enormous effort to make this trail a reality. How often do you see so many entities working together for a common cause? Last fall someone covered over the yellow triangular blazes of the Northwest Path for several miles. The East Hampton Trails Preservation trail crew restored the blazes in addition to performing a large backlog of routine spring trail maintenance. A mile of PP blazes in Bridgehampton and a mile in North Sea were also vandalized. I find it unbelievable that someone pulled the plastic blazes off the DEC red loop trail in Sarnoff. Our network of trails is mentioned in all the travel literature produced for our region. Tourism is vital to our economy. There are scant resources available to keep the trails sustainable, even though a few small work parties from the trails groups are valiantly trying. People who vandalize trails sap our limited resources and hurt everyone.

My friend John Virgilio and I restored the four miles of vandalized blazes almost immediately. It was unthinkable for us to allow an insult to so many good people remain unaddressed. If you are interested in helping with clearing the trails or periodically monitoring them in this area contact John via e-mail or call trails advocate Erick Burke at 631-924-3099.

The day after restoring the blazes I needed to get away, so I took my own advice (from last week's Dan's Papers) and walked north from the end of Napeague Harbor Road towards Goff Point. I didn't walk the

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

What a great Fourth of July. The weather held up and everyone enjoyed the long and lazy weekend. Let's do some summertime shopping.

In the Bridgehampton Commons on Montauk Highway at Lands End at Kmart, you will be happy to know that they have expanded the Summer Shop. There is more of everything, including beach bags, bathing suits, legendary beach towels, durable personalized totes, shorts, tees, and polos for men and women. Don't pass up the wonderful selection of fine teak furniture at the Summer Shop, which will only be at this location through Labor Day Weekend.

The newest additions just arrived at Paulpac on Jobs Lane in Southampton are the latest in fashion, jeans, jackets, tips, and bags, all with artist's designs, and new styles in jewelry...A perfect addition to your summer wardrobe.

At Rose Jewelers on Main Street in Southampton you can meet the designer Mona Taner and view the Bubbles Collection on Friday, July 7 and Saturday, July 8, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

At Dazzelle on Jobs Lane in Southampton there is a "Summer Trunk Show" on July 7, 9, and 10 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. featuring Flores and Flores. Immediate orders will be available on dresses, jackets, separates and tunics.

Fortunoff on Montauk Highway is celebrating the season with savings of $400 on their Roma Cast aluminum outdoor dining set and stainless steel gas grill. That's a savings of $800 on just two items...

Celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary, Jay Moorhead Antiques At Baiting Hollow Green on Montauk Highway in East Hampton, has their doors open. Check out their fifty-year collection of antiques and artifacts from East End homes and estates. There are two shops that are filled with fine antiques and charming collectibles that include furniture, prints, paintings, art deco, art nouveau, pottery, glass, china, mirrors, rugs, quilts, paisleys, dolls, copper, and more.

At Rogers Larkin Fine Furnishings on Newtown Lane in East Hampton, stop in to enjoy their summer sale on select merchandise that includes floor samples, special ordered items and accessories. The shop is filled with antiques, fine reproductions, antique rugs, and elegant accessories.

If you are looking for some cool resort wear, look no further than Euphoria on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton. Their Fourth of July sale with 15% off all merchandise (except jewelry), including beachwear, international designs, shoes, sandals, handbags, day and nighttime clothing and accessories, will be running until Friday, July 7, so get going. Today may be the last day.

The Shabby Mansion, located in East Hampton, is where you will find an eclectic collection and selection of vintage treasures for the home. The shop is having a "blow out sale" on unique wrought iron, planters, benches, birdbaths, large mirrors, tall, elegant vases, very large (and I mean large) candles, architectural pieces and luxury items. For directions, call 631-324-2406.

LF, on Newtown Lane in East Hampton, has just introduced some of the hottest trends of summer in clothing and accessories, including KEDS distressed sneakers and ballet flats. KEDS is showing off its new looks that coincide with fast-pace changes occurring in the contemporary fashion world. Shoppers at LF can now find a pair of KEDS to complete an outfit with themes anywhere from feminine to punk to vintage. The Dolce & Gabbana ballet flats, featuring funky lime-green piping and strawberries, complement lines such as Paul's Boutique and Cyberg, while the Distressed slip-ons are a perfect addition to any Life And Legend piece. KEDS new Distressed styles also go great with vintage dresses by Reko.

For the first time, the Shoe-Inn is having a "boots only warehouse sale" for four days only, from Thursday, July 6 through Sunday, July 9. There will be 3500 pairs of boots to choose from at affordable prices that range from $50 to $150. The warehouse sale is located at the American Legion Hall on Montauk Highway in Amagansett.

D.J. Hart on Main Street in Sag Harbor is filled to the rafters this summer with new, exciting and fun clothing, jewelry and accessories at very affordable prices. And.....the shop is open seven days a week until mid-night, giving you the opportunity to shop after dinner and a movie.

On my way home from Sag Harbor I stopped at the Whalebone Store on Noyac Road to pick up a birthday card for my granddaughter, Alyssa's, sixth birthday. I found Linda, the owner of this old fashioned general store making up gift bags of chocolates for the summer season in the shape of "river rocks." There is always something fun going on here, the store has all new summer merchandise, including gifts, photo frames, tees, rafts, floats, beach chairs, signs with all different sayings on them, talking dolls, and plants galore. And...there is always something on sale here.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Summer Shopping!

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, and you would like everyone to know about it, I would love to hear from you via e-mail at www.shoptil@danspapers.com or you can reach me by fax at: 631-537-6755.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

Wild By Nature, 260 West Montauk Highway, Hampton Bays 631-723-3071 - www.wildbynature.com

Recently opened in Hampton Bays, the very spacious natural and organic supermarket Wild By Nature offers fresh, delicious and wholesome foods and high quality natural healthcare products. It is known for farm fresh organically - grown fruits and veggies, locally and from around the world. Not to be missed are their fresh-baked goods and breads; treats made from fresh natural ingredients, many low fat, no sugar, and wheat/gluten-free choices. In abundance are the organic meats and poultry, free of hormones, antibiotics and chemicals, as well as dockside fresh fish and shellfish. Grocery, dairy, frozen foods, hot and cold prepared meals, vitamins and nutrition supplements, natural personal care products, and earth-friendly household goods are also available.

Cellar Wine Merchants, 25 Hampton Road, Southampton - 631-259-2313

Cellar Wine Merchants, the brand new wine store in Southampton (next to Saks) celebrated their Grand Opening last weekend. Their focus is a little different from other stores on the East End in that each bottle at Cellar Wine Merchants represents the best of its kind in terms of quality and value. Even a bottle under $20 in this store will be truly unique and a great value. Education and superb customer service are the standard here.

C. Whitmore Garden's Annex, 26 Montauk Highway, Amagansett 631-267-3182

C. Whitmore Gardens has just opened a special new "Sales Annex" on the second floor of their main building. The annex is a great addition to the building that features significant discounts, from 30%-60% off original prices on items such as botanical prints, furniture, container vases, candles, potpourri, and other decorative pieces for the home and garden. C. Whitmore Gardens is a full-service Garden Center that offers unique floral designs, landscaping and gardening services, gifts, and décor for the home and garden. They are open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Karin Sanders Fine Art, 126 Main Street, Sag Harbor - 631-899-3430

Karin Sanders Fine Art is a gallery and consulting agency defined by its scholarly expertise, market savvy and effort to meet the varied art needs of its clients. Founded by art historian and dealer Karin Sanders, KSFA represents and exhibits emerging and mature artists from the U.S., Europe, Central and South America, and Asia. Since 1990, Karin Sanders has worked closely with a high-profile clientele, which has included private collectors, corporations and international designers. Working for over ten years in New York, she has now returned to the East End ready to contribute to the growing international scope of the Hamptons art scene. Striving to bring the viewer into a place where artworks can be seen without the burden of a consumer-oriented environment, but rather a sense of comfort with which the individual can enjoy and experience the work. Karin Sanders curates exhibitions with assistance from Karen Cantor and Erin Freier.

Benton Nyce, 409 First Street, Greenport - 631-477-0729

Jennifer Benton and David Nyce have opened their gallery last week with a premiere exhibition of the Benton Nyce gallery in the rapidly growing hotspot of Greenport. The gallery presents seven artists, a balance of local favorites including Nyce, himself, whose elegant furniture is well known on Long Island, together with new friends. Behind the paintings, sculpture and furniture, all seven of the artists bring substantial and impressive resumes. The artists whose works will be shown include Willy Heeks, Ellen Wiener, Marianne Weil, Ardon Scott, Boar Glass, William Russell, and Benton Nyce, who promises to follow the July 1 opening with more compelling combinations of the celebrated familiar and new, unknown artwork.

inland grassy trails (too many ticks) and instead walked along the shore. It had stopped raining, there was a mist in the air, and the wind was whipping up sand. I saw people windsurfing and The Art Barge across the harbor. The patterns in the sand caused by different-weight mineral particles separated by the wind were fascinating. Scallop shells had blown up against the berm crest and were held in place by exposed roots. The sand here doesn't compact at the water's edge - it sucks your feet in. The sand grains are abraded smooth and round. At the point, the spit of land turns south, facing into the wind. The shoreline is mottled with many small stones; anything that is light here gets blown landward. There was a land bridge to Hicks Island, which is normally separated by a narrow expanse of water. I was considering continuing my walk when several least terns popped into the air shouting, "zreep, zreep" (stay away from our nests). I always try to be a considerate guest and since I was visiting their home, I was sensitive to their request. Instead of walking to Hick's Island, I walked back a bit to where the water was deeper and better for swimming. There's nothing like a day at Napeague to restore calm.

EAST END KID: GRUCCI AND ME

BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM KATLEAN DE
MONCHY AND DAVID POST

I used to be afraid of fireworks. The sound was too loud. But now I love fireworks, thanks to Southampton Fresh Air Home's American Picnic where the Grucci fireworks were seen. The night was perfect and there was a big crowd of parents and kids at the Picnic. When we arrived, after a long line of cars waited for the valet (I told dad to park down the road), there was a jumping castle and soccer game. But I love games (maybe because my Dad was born in Coney Island?) and I went right to the games section. I won with a little help from the boys. It was fun. Then we went to dinner. I met and took a picture with Arnold Greenberg who created Snapple (I love Snapple but it is a sometimes drink). We had a barbecue dinner then took some pictures for this column. Then it was dark enough for the cool fireworks to begin. American Picnic, now 19-years-old, is a really fun event and benefits the Southampton Fresh Air Home, which is a sleep-in camp for kids with physical challenges.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

The crowds cheer! An astonished fellow points up above the skyscrapers to the blip in the air. A pretty lady shrieks with joyful wonder, "Is it a bird?" A shocked guy with a little moustache exclaims, "Is it a plane?" Well, we all know darn well what it is and we all know he's back, Ya'sir! Superman Returns in epic form – over 2 1/2 hours of warmth, Superman is sensitive. And there's blah,blah,blah. Heat, all the incredible fiery effects $263 million can buy and some distinct references to the caped hero as a modern day Jesus here to save mankind and the pitifully poor, summer movie box office showings.

More than sixty years ago two nice Brooklyn boys, Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, created the wonder boy for DC Comics, endowing him with attributes it would take many years for movie makers to catch up to and improve upon. 'Course you know, Superguy didn't initially fly, he leapt with wires showing unashamedly, as George Reeves did it in the black and white 50s, and it wasn't until 1978 when snazzy director Richard Donner breathed real life into the primary-colored latex suit. He filled it with Christopher Reeve who filled the role admirably. He gave Clark Kent wit and sleek flights of fancy, just like his director, Donner. Superman Returns director Bryan Singer (the original X-Men films spectacle conductor) out-does those X-Men's eye-popping moments and admittedly loving Donner's original, slavishly remakes it, but with a lot of fillers. Luckily he knows what good is, so it's in there: Superboy's childhood farm and the wisdom of his sainted mother, reprised by Eva Marie Saint. Clark's job at The Daily Planet and its editor, Frank Langella as Perry White, and Lois Lane, reporter, Kate Bosworth. They will all fight for Truth, Justice and – oops, this time, no American way of life. There's the evil man with the bad plan, Kevin Spacey and his second banana, Kitty Kowalski. Following Donner's 78 style-setter, includes the casting of a Christopher Reeve look-alike, the soap actor, Brandon Routh, who is fine but doesn't quite fill Reeve's tights. He's more youthful and he wraps you around his cute li'l finger.

Superman Returns

Kate Bosworth is a serious Lois, but kittenish with Clark. Lois Lane, in Donner's Superman, had a mouth as steely tough as the chastity belt that kept her stockings and Clark Kent and Superman in their place. Margot Kidder's 78 Lois was some flirty tough and sassy reporter/witch, flinty-igniting. And, they called him The Man of Steel?

We all know how quickly downhill the sequels went from OK to horrid. Let's remember that in the second installment Clark or was it Sup', had his way with Margot's Lois. The Man of Steel finally showed his mettle or metal (steel or kryptonite). We need not discuss sequels Three and foul Four. Moving along to the au courant Lois, she has waited five years, whilst the strongman's been away. I mean away, looking for the remains of his birthplace, the planet, Krypton. Hey, five years is not so bad! Think about this. It's taken 20 years for Superman Returns to get made, after many million-dollar development deals, the newest Lois should not feel too frustrated. She's borne a son, now age five. How's your math? Great Caesar's ghost! Can we call him Superdaddy? Besides being a Mom, Lois now plans to marry her editor's nephew, Richard. James Marsden easily makes Richard a believable part of a love triangle or, love quadrangle of Lois, Richard, Clark and Superman. Editor White is still the complete journalist. He wants to know how Superman's reappearance will affect the Stock market and politics. Young Jimmy Olsen is gee-whizzed by Sam Huntington and gets to do a turn with the original Jimmy of the old TV series, Jack Larson. The old B&W Superman George Reeves died by his own hand early in life. An eerie resurrection from the dead brings back Marlon Brando delivering the outer space silliness he did in the beginning, coiffed in the Carvel Swirl hairdo.

The Carvel custard swirl makes me aware that this review is a kind of historic record of regeneration. Comic book heroes fling us back to the past of our youths, no matter what decade that was. Most appear to love that. (Do our senses come to attention with a revival of Silas Mariner?) When I walk into a Barnes and Noble or Borders, I'm greeted by racks of comic books, just like the ones our teachers and parents banned (almost). Today, they suit our expanding technology and needs. Does the present Superman fill a need for the soul saving Savior the movie indicates? Was Mel Gibson's Passion of Christ a blip in the sky?

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. Sarah Halsey assists him.

Take Five 2006 with Jan Silver

The second week of July overflows with wonderful entertainment. Roseanne Cash sings at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center tonight and the leading Beatles' tribute band Fab Faux performs two shows tomorrow (call 631-288-1500 after noon for tickets). At East Hampton's Guild Hall this weekend, accomplished actresses Cynthia Nixon, Judith Ivey and others give a staged reading of a new play tonight, cabaret diva Andrea Marcovicci performs two shows on Saturday, and Broadway musical theater artists sing Leonard Bernstein's Broadway music on Sunday evening. Music Festival of the Hamptons has concerts daily this week and Bay Street Theatre's rousing production of The Who's Tommy continues through Sunday.

The annual Riverhead Blues Festival is Saturday and Sunday with headliners Mose Allison, David Maxwell, and Little Charlie and the Nightcats. The music starts at 11 a.m. Saturday with 36 bands will playing over the two days at the outdoor main stage on the Peconic River's bank, at Club 91 and the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall (only $2.50 daily admission!). Choral Society of the Hamptons performs Orff's Carmina Burana Sunday, 5 & 7:30 p.m., at Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church (ticket $25 adults, $10 children; call 631-204-9402).

There are many writers speaking at local venues this weekend (see "Speakers"), several independent films being screened (see "Films"), and good music at local clubs (see "Music"). Distinguished poets Dan Moran and Grace Schulman open East Hampton's "Poetry Marathon," reading from their award-winning writings at the Marine Museum, Bluff Road, Amagansett, Sunday at 4 p.m. (free admission). And there's a slew of good benefits this weekend (see final section of this column).

THEATER

Broadway actor/director Harris Yulin guides Cynthia Nixon, Judith Ivey, Elizabeth Wilson, Anna Reeder and Danielle Skrastaad through several moving monologues on women's lives written by actress Kristen Lowman. This staged reading of Time Will Tell is at the John Drew Theater, Guild Hall, East Hampton, tonight at 8 p.m. ($18 members, $20 guests).

This is the last weekend to see the rock opera The Who's Tommy starring Euan Morton and a very talented ensemble cast at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor. Tickets ($60-70) are available after 11 a.m. at the box office or online at www.baystreet.org. Euan Morton will sing songs from his new CD after the show on Saturday ( tickets $20 at the door). A new play, Men In Hiding by Jess Gregg, will be read by actors Kate Mueth, Harry Burney, Robert Gatto, Chuck Novatka and Stratton Walling on Sunday, 2 p.m. at Bay Street Theatre. ($10 at the door).

MUSIC

Dave Evans' MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest

The film based on the theme park ride returns, this time with mercifully little emphasis on the insipid 'romance' between Keira Knightley and Orlando Bloom and a far larger part for Johnny Depp's spectacular Captain Jack Sparrow. Bill Nighy of Love Actually fame proves a worthily camp opponent as the half-fish, half-man Davy Jones.

Once in a Lifetime

With World Cup fever winding down, after an especially dull tournament, it seems the wrong time to release a nostalgic look back on the soccer scene of New York in the seventies. Directors Paul Crowder and John Dower piece the story together through interviews with the players of the New York Cosmos, most notably Pele.

Superman Returns

In an age of bloated franchises flogged well past the dead-horse stage (Cheaper by the Dozen 2? Garfield 2?) it's hard to get excited about the big summer blockbusters any more. It comes as a lovely surprise, with Bryan Singer's resuscitation of the man in the red cape, to find yourself ogling the screen in a kind of childish wonder. This looks lovely and will sweep you away - just don't think too hard.

The Devil Wears Prada

Pity Anna Wintour. First the editor of Vogue had her work behavior scandalously fictionalized in Lauren Weisberger's novel and now she is mimicked by one of the best mimics in town, Meryl Streep. Anne Hathaway plays her hapless and abused assistant in what turns out to be a delightfully camp and frothy comedy about the media and the boss from hell.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

The Game That's Sweeping the Nation

It is a game played by both the elitist of the elite and the rowdiest of the rowdy. At any community college you will find the game played until the early hours of a frat-partying-morning and you can also play a game inside the ivy-laden walls of the most expensive, challenging universities in the entire country. Mathematicians play it, athletes play it, medical school students play it and most importantly, college girls play it. I'm talking about beer pong. A party game that has captivated the minds of a college nation, and has matured to bars and house parties at some of the fanciest and most elaborate gatherings in the Hamptons.

If you were born yesterday, beer pong is a game of wits, skill, trust and teamwork. It requires two ping pong balls, four players, a ping-pong table, beer, and ten plastic cups. Also known as Beirut, the game is a simple one, but the beauty is in its poetry of strategy, skill and luck. Essentially, teams of two players face one another at the ends of a ping-pong table with the goal of shooting a ping-pong ball into their adversaries' cups, which are set up in a "V" at the end of each table. If a player shoots a ping-pong ball into their opponent's cup, then two things happen. One, the opposing player has to remove the cup from the table and two, the opposing player has to drink the beer that is in the cup.

What is so great about this glorious game is that it is not gender or age biased in any way. Anybody can play this game and everybody does. The other interesting thing about the game is the different skill levels that players have. For example, some players actually play better the more beer that they drink. Hence, if they are usually losing games, they often will come back and win later on in the evening because of the amount of beer consumption.

Do not be fooled by basketball players stepping up to a beer pong table. Nine times out of ten they are not as good as anybody else. The size and shape of a ping-pong ball in relationship to a basketball is much different. Let's not forget that many times basketball players do not have the experience necessary to be a winner at beer pong.

Trash talking is more than welcome during a beer pong match. However, fights are never fun. So when you embrace the glorious game, don't take the insults and psych-outs seriously. It is all part of the growing sport.

Recently bars around the country have been hosting beer pong tournaments to encourage people to come to their bar and the strategy has been working. The Lakeside in Montauk has tables set up on their outdoor patios and encourage people to play. Many of the Irish summer folk head down there for a friendly match of pong.

If you have the opportunity to partake in a game of beer pong, be sure to have a good partner to play with if you want a chance to win the game. Beware of guys with beer bellies, big smiles on their faces, a scruffy beard and a sleeveless shirt. These are the men that have developed a lifestyle around the sport and will most likely destroy you.

There are few rules in the game but some are very standard. For example, if you are able to bounce the ball once and land it in a cup, that takes two cups off your enemy's side. However, if you try to bounce the ball into a cup, your opponent is allowed to block the shot. There are also usually "house" rules regarding how far you can lean forward when taking your shot across the table, as well as other house rules regarding the amount of beer that must be consumed during each match.

Tournaments of beer pong are sweeping the nation and there is one website that is the authority on broadcasting tournaments. It is called www.beerpong.tv and should be checked out if you are interested in competing in tournaments around the country, as well as viewing tournaments with a sport commentary. It is a fantastic website.

The phenomenal game only seems to be gathering momentum. So don't be afraid to grab two balls and throw them into a beer filled cup. You will have one heck of a good time.

Steven Einzig: The Life Behind the Party

Imagine you are having a landmark birthday, or a wedding, or simply a major bash and want to make the occasion memorable and very, very special. In your mind's eye, you can see your favorite recording artist providing the entertainment. How does an average guy make that kind of fantasy come true? By contacting dream-weaver Steven Einzig, founder of www.bookingentertainment.com, and leaving the details to him. If he says he can do it, then you can rest easy. He will make your event of a lifetime happen.

Steven Einzig launched his company in March of 1996. By the summer of that year, he had booked his first double bill in the Hamptons; James Brown and Ray Charles at The Deep Hollow Ranch. "Up until then," says Mr. Einzig, "it was the best show I had ever seen! Everybody was dancing and having a great time."

Steven Einzig is an old-fashioned kind of guy. He is happily married and has two children. He believes that his word is his bond. In Einzig's world, integrity is all. It's a concept that works for him and delights his clients. In a recent telephone interview from his home in Amagansett, Mr.

Einzig said, "I learned my business ethics from the 'old school,' from men who did a deal on a handshake, men who were only as good as their word. I learned from the best. I worked at Universal with Richard Nader, and in reading Bill Graham's book he said, in order to do things right, you have to be a man of your word. Because that is not the kind of business you want to retire from."

"Who do you call when you have $150,000 to spend on a fundraiser? You call me. Because I live by the 'old school' rules, and I find it rubs off on everyone I work with."

Steven Einzig would like to see any entertainer in the world available for whatever occasion a person can dream up. Whether it is a product launch or a Bar mitzvah, he makes top notch entertainers accessible to the average person – something he calls "a turn key package." As part of that package, he arranges the entertainers' flights, fees, and hotels, arranges for stage managers, transportation, sound, and lighting. He even arranges catering and towels. His production manager, who has been with him for over 15 years, is the best in the business, making whatever sort of event that can be imagined, seamlessly realized. Mr. Einzig has provided entertainers like Eminem, 50 Cent, Joss Stone, Alicia Keys, Bon Jovi, Bryan Adams, Meat Loaf, Lyle Lovett, Itzhak Perlman, Huey Lewis and the News, all for private, high-profile functions.

After fifteen years in the business, is there one concert that remains his favorite?

Without even taking the time to think about it he says, "The Legends of the Blues Show at Avery

Fisher Hall at Lincoln Center, where John Mayer and Warren Haynes came down to jam. It was January 28, 2005, it was winter in NYC and every major publication was there from The New York Times, Rolling Stone, The New York Post to The Daily News. There had never before been such a bill. There was Buddy Guy, Muddy Waters, David (Honeyboy) Edwards, Robert Lockwood Jr. and members of the Howlin' Wolf Band led by Eddie Shaw, jamming with the likes of James Cotton, Bob Margolin and Pinetop Perkins on piano (at 91), as well as Little Milton, who was backed up by Mr. Guy's band... Many of the stars of the evening had never played together before, and would probably never have the opportunity to play together again. It was a landmark event in the blues world with people flying in from all over the world to witness the greatest blues legends who ever lived, and whose music paved the way for everyone who was to follow. The concert lasted three hours and so far, it's been the highlight of my career. And I'm so glad it happened because Little Milton died shortly after that. And what a way to go, when he was at the top!

"Concerts like that one," says Mr. Einzig and I can hear him smiling, "are really my big payoff. Watching people having a great time at an event that I create is what my business is all about. Why would anyone ever want to retire from a business that brings so much pleasure to people?"

Why indeed?

Entertainment In The Hamptons

Field Trip!

Looking for an outdoor summer activity for the entire family during your stay in the Hamptons? Don't fret because the Hamptons is the place to be for interactions with nature.

The Montauk Point Lighthouse is a very well-known historical site in the Hamptons. The Lighthouse is the eastern most point one may go on Long Island. The Lighthouse's roots date back to its 1796 construction. Aside from the breathtaking views and scenery surrounding the Lighthouse, which includes a look out into the Atlantic Ocean, one can go on a tour of the Lighthouse as well. The Lighthouse is open for tours from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on weekdays and Sundays and is open from 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturdays. Museum admission is $7 for adults, $6 for senior citizens, and $3 for children. To find out more information, call 631-668-2544.

Another staple of Montauk is Hither Hills State Park. From bathhouse facilities with hot showers to a 10-acre picnic area with horseshoe courts and hiking trails, Hither Hills has it all. The 1,755-acre park has 40 acres, including a freshwater lake, 2 miles of ocean front beach, and walking dunes. Hither Hills is a great place to visit for the day or campout overnight with the family. For more information, call 631-668-2554.

Camp Hero State Park in Montauk has 415 acres of wooded area and beachfront land along the Atlantic Ocean. The park is a former military base and is currently a National Historic Site. Also in Montauk are the Theodore Roosevelt County Park (631-852-7878) and Montauk Downs State Park (631-668-3781) where people can camp and hike as well. Montauk Downs also brags a very challenging golf course.

The Hamptons is also home to various nature preserves. Among them are the Mashomack Nature Preserve in Shelter Island (631-749-1001), Morton National Wildlife Refuge in Sag Harbor (631-286-0485), Conscience Point Wildlife Refuge in North Sea (631-286-0485), Amagansett National Wildlife Refuge in Amagansett (631-286-0485), and the Quogue Wildlife Refuge in Quogue (631-653-4771). These places may not be the typical Hamptons hot spots, but they make for a wonderful peaceful getaway. The whole family can walk through these grounds and see the various species of wildlife that are in the Hamptons and it is a great learning experience for younger ones to interact with the environment. Go see the many picturesque spots throughout these various locations.

Another place where children can meet face to face with nature and wildlife is the Atlantis Marine World in Riverhead. The aquarium sets out to educate children about marine life and environmental preservation. The whole family is guaranteed to have an exciting day at Atlantis Marine World as there are outdoor and indoor exhibits which feature local fish, penguins, seals, and a shark tank in which people can even go in a cage and see the sharks up close and personal. Call 631-208-9200 to find out more information.

For those more interested in art and nature, the LongHouse Reserve and Madoo Conservancy are perfect matches. LongHouse Reserve is located in East Hampton and has an art gallery, arboretum, and sculpture gardens. The gardens are open every Wednesday and Saturday from 2-5 p.m. The entrance fee is $10 for adults and $8 for senior citizens. For further information, call 631-329-3568.

The other garden to visit is the Madoo Conservancy located in Sagaponack. Admission is $10 and the garden hours are Wednesday and Saturday from 1-5 p.m. There will also be historic tours at 10 a.m. on July 13th and 27th, August 10th and 24th, and September 7th and 14th, coinciding with Bridgehampton's 350th Anniversary. These tours will cost $15 per person. Call 631-537-8200 for more information.

The Hamptons may be known for a crazy nightlife and party scene, but sometimes it is nice to appreciate the natural world that is all around. After all, most of these places close at dark, so you might as well visit them during the day and go out later that night.

As Albert Einstein once said, "Joy in looking and comprehending is nature's most beautiful gift."

scopeHampton Returns

Some come to the Hamptons for the social scene, others come for the natural beauty. But since figures like Salvador Dali and Peggy Guggenheim discovered that amber light of dusk decades ago, artists and art collectors, too, have flocked to the East End. Galleries now grace every town, and artists can be seen painting en plein-air or sculpting in their studios from Westhampton to Montauk. Therefore, it's no surprise that Scope Hamptons, an art showcase created to make art collecting more approachable, has decided to host its second weekend of art in the Hamptons. Scope's mission is "to demystify the buying process of contemporary art by producing international art fairs that nurture cutting-edge art and emerging culture." The fairs offer a forum for prospective and established art dealers, curators and artists in a casual setting. In this way, Scope has become an important resource for established and burgeoning collectors, as well as for museums, corporate curators, and those of us who simply appreciate art and would like some for our own homes.

Scope has fairs in London and Miami as well, but the summer extravaganza had to be out here on the East End. This year, the East Hampton Studios, exhibiting over 60 international emerging and established galleries, will be the 20,000 square foot venue. Scope Hampton Summer Art Weekend will take place from July 13-16, a showcase of the contemporary art world. Scope will be working in cooperation with the Watermill Center, the Parrish Art Museum, Guild Hall, The Retreat, and the Music Festival of the Hampton. The weekend will incorporate benefits, receptions, and tours to help support our local art institutions.

"Birth of a Culture" at Borghi Fine Art

This summer, Mark Borghi Fine Art on Main Street in Bridgehampton is displaying the photography of Leroy Grannis, a surf legend. The exhibit is aptly named Birth of a Culture: 60s & 70s Surf Photography. Leroy Grannis did not simply photograph surfers; he represented and documented the surfing lifestyle. The years recorded by Grannis are considered to be the golden age of surfing and are arguably the years when America's passion for surfing really blossomed.

As you enter the gallery, Grannis' work makes an immediate impact. The simplicity of the space at Mark Borghi complements the vibrancy of the subject matter. The Chromogenic prints, all 36 x 36 or 26 x 36 in, are framed in stark white. The images are labeled with the name of the rider, the place and the date. The works themselves are splashes of unbelievably varied and vivid shades of ocean blue punctuated by wildly colorful boards. The act of reading the water, tides and waves to catch the perfect one is almost a spiritual experience and Grannis manages to capture all of the passion, emotion and art in surfing.

Grannis was not only a legend among the developing surf culture, but was a pioneer of surf photography. These photos were taken in a time before waterproof, high resolution or hi-tech cameras. As Grannis continued to work, he developed much of the technology he used.

His personally distinct style has been described as a "palpable texture." Many photographers had documented surfing from the beach, but Grannis was the first to paddle out into the waves and shoot surfers close up. One particular photo, titled

"Kent Layton, 22nd Street, Hermosa Beach" and shot in 1969, shows the intense concentration in the face of the surfer as he connects with the wave and rides it. This is a perfectly captured image of someone who is living his life's passion. This kind of intimacy had never before been seen in the world of surf photography and is part of what still fascinates us about these images.

The surf culture is seen in Grannis' photos of board shops at twilight, a judge's stand erected atop an old bus, and smiling surfers carrying their long boards home. Surf legends such as Greg Noll are photographed alongside unknown riders, illustrating the essence of a culture whose gods are just surfers like everyone else. One particularly captivating image is titled, "Ron Newman, Unknown and Ponce Rosa, Waimea Bay." Shot in 1966, this is an image of three surfers riding the same wave. The first rider seems to be having the perfect ride, while the next is poised for a wipeout, and the last rider is looking up, watching both of them. To me, this image captures the camaraderie of surfing and the purity of the surf lifestyle. The surfers' muscles are tense but their postures are relaxed, and they are riding the waves, not fighting them.

This show is not about monstrous waves or extreme moves; it is about capturing the spirit, style and soul of the surf culture. This is art that sparks the imagination and sense of nostalgia. The response to it had been passionate and varied. From young surfers to buttoned-up businessmen, all want to own a piece of surf culture, and since every piece of work in this exhibit is for sale, everyone can. Many of the pieces remind me of the summer scenes of Ditch Plains surfers today, which is perhaps why the Los Angeles based exhibit, filled with photos of California, is having such success on the East End. Taschen published a mere 1,000 copies of a book of Leroy Grannis's collected work and all have sold. Mark Borghi has signed copy number 505 on display in the gallery if you wish to flip through it. The collection of photos in the book is riveting. A black and white image of a board split in half against a piling and another of the smiling participants and shining trophies of a surf competition beam from the glossy pages.

Leroy Grannis began to surf at fourteen on a borrowed redwood plank that weighed almost 100 pounds. Since that day he has flawlessly combined his two passions with stunning results. Looking at his work I can't help but wonder which he loves more; photography or surfing? Grannis, now 89 years old, still works and surfs in California.

—Alison Bevilacqua

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"GUILD HALL COLLECTS"

Some works are old and some are new, but they're all first-class. That's the bottom line when it comes to the current exhibit at Guild Hall, "Guild Hall Collects: Gifts in Celebration of the 75th Anniversary." To say first-class is not an elegant or insightful statement to be sure, but it's a truthful one.

Another aspect is more controversial. Are the works supposed to represent the best contemporary artists and/or the most well-known in our midst? If so, it recalls the Parrish Museum's relatively recent show featuring both North and South Fork artists. It's curious that some of the Guild Hall contributors were not included in the Parrish exhibit. Diversity and difference of opinion are alive and well in the Hamptons.

The display, as arranged by curator Christina Strassfield, is as lively and upbeat as usual, and allows for breathing room, also as usual when Ms.

Strassfield is at the helm. Particular favorites, however, are those we didn't expect to see that are variations on an artist's signature style or theme.

Ned Smyth's "Untitled 2003" is one example, a graphite on mylar piece resembling an abstract detail rather than an entire entity, considering Mr. Smyth's usually large configurations. But its classic feeling and dramatic presence still convey the artist's signature intentions.

An even bigger surprise is Eric Fischl's "Two Figures," a solar etching that's a real knock out: an ironic piece because it has none of Mr. Fischl's usual bold, provocative images. But his recurring concepts continue, no matter how subtle, graceful and abstract: the lack of direct eye contact between the couple; the fragmentation of body parts; the frozen moment in time.

Michelle Stuart's "The Rite of Spring" is as eloquent and graceful in a formal way as Mr. Fischl's work is in a contextual way. Her circular motifs and beeswax medium imbue the work with both classical and contemporary elements. We can't help but remember Ms. Stuart's signature butterflies and moths when we look at this endeavor, allowing for a flood of experiences to surround us.

Donald Sultan's "Smoke Ring 11" and Pat Steir's "Dragon Waterfall" recall another kind of aesthetic, namely, the power of movement and particularly the sensation the viewer feels when looking at the work, known as kinesthesia.

David Salle's "Untitled" provides an unexpected jolt as well. His woman sitting on a chair is a bit risqué, the superimposition of a dog's head giving a conceptual and sexual thrust to the piece. Come to think of it, there aren't many conceptual pieces represented in the show at all. To each his own.

"Guild Hall Collects" will be on view until July 30. See guildhall.org for details.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Ted Asnis

This week's cover by Ted Asnis is an ode to the artist's penchant for flowers, local scenery and his sense of humor. Speaking of which, the title is "Mum's the Word." We caught up with Mr. Asnis in Sag Harbor where he has lived full time since the early 1980s. He was busy at work, as usual, in his studio.

Q: Does the cover represent your usual subject matter?

A: Yes! I love to paint local beach scenes, particularly the dunes. I've also been doing some portraits, even a few horses.

Q: How about the medium you use? Is it pretty typical of your work?

A: Yes. I use acrylic. It is a good medium for me because I paint quickly.

Q: And the style? The cover seems to combine Realism and Impressionism.

A: I'd like to do more Impressionism, to get a look that is more free.

Q: As a painter, you're self-taught. What was your official training like?

A: I went to the University of Florida with the idea of becoming a pharmacist, like my father. But I soon switched to architecture.

Q: Did you ever dabble in art before this?

A: Yes. When I was in the Army, I did a cover for Stars and Stripes. And I drew quick sketches of people for fun.

Q: When you graduated from the university, what happened then?

A: I came back to New York and started my own design firm; this was the late 1970s. I did commercial office planning for some very challenging projects.

Q: Some of your clients were challenging, too, I bet, representing some very interesting businesses.

A: Right. I designed the offices for Barry Diller, CEO of Paramount Pictures, and offices for Simon and Shuster. I remember also doing a disco project for Cousin Brucie.

Q: You were involved in a lot of "cutting-edge" enterprises, in film, publishing and music. That's exciting.

A: I also did the cover for Interior Design Magazine during this period.

Q: After 19 years, you gave up your design firm and moved to Sag Harbor in 1983. What did you find appealing about life here?

A: I think it was a lot of things, but I especially liked meeting other artists and people interested in golf like I am. Going to places like Bobby Van's, and "hanging out" with them. I remember particularly Larry Rivers. Speaking of Bobby Van's, I did a six foot painting of a bull called "Bobby" for the restaurant in Manhattan at 25 Broad Street.

Q: You seem to have an affinity for restaurants and food. Aren't your paintings hanging in Bridgehampton's Bobby Van's? And you'll be having a show in August at Pierre's Restaurant. But besides that, you like to cook, right?

A: I sure do. I catered my son's engagement party for 120 people. And I like to cook for my wife when she's here part of the week. Otherwise, she spends several days in New York at her business.

Q: But I imagine that art is still your first love.

A: Well, I also love independent films on IFC and Judy Collins' "Send in the Clowns," too. And Al Hirshfeld.

Q: Good choices. Me, too.

Mr. Asnis will be showing works at Bridgehampton's Pierre's restaurant during the month of August.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Have you ever noticed how chicken or potato salads dressed with mayonnaise tend to look and taste the same? Instead of the ubiquitous use of mayonnaise in these salads, I prefer to prepare a mustard based vinaigrette. When an acid such as vinegar or lemon juice is combined with oil and whisked into a mustard base, it will thicken and bind to a creamy emulsion. Add additional flavorings such as garlic, shallot or fresh herbs, and vary your vinegars and oils, and you'll lend a rich and distinctive taste to all your salads.

Dress a crisp green bean, chevre and toasty pignoli nut salad with a mustard vinaigrette, and lend textural interest using a grainy Dijon mustard for a potato salad with feta cheese and Nicoise olives. Chicken and broccoli salad with Dijon tarragon vinaigrette and toasted hazelnut garnish is an elegant summertime favorite.

GREEN BEAN, CHEVRE AND PIGNOLI NUT SALAD

Fresh green beans are crisp and juicy when picked straight from the garden. At a local farm stand, look for beans that are clean, fresh and so crisp they snap in your fingers.

Serves 6

1/2 pound firm crisp, green beans
1/4 pound domestic chevre
1/4 cup pignoli nuts, lightly toasted

Vinaigrette

1 large or 2 medium finely chopped shallots
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon raspberry vinegar
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Freshly ground pepper

1. Cut through the stem ends of the beans and discard. I prefer to leave on the gracefully curved tail ends. Rinse clean in cold water. Bring 4-5 quarts of water to a boil. Add coarse salt to the water and put in the beans. Cook until barely tender, about 3-4 minutes. Drain and refresh quickly under a spray of cold water to stop the cooking and set the color. Transfer to a clean kitchen towel and pat dry to absorb excess moisture. Set aside or refrigerate overnight in suitable container.

2. Prepare Vinaigrette: Place shallots in a mixing bowl, add the mustard and vinegar, and stir to mix. Whisk in oil in a thin, steady stream until thoroughly incorporated. Season with pepper to taste and adjust seasoning if necessary.

3. Pour the vinaigrette over the beans and toss to mix. Divide beans equally on 6 salad plates. Crumble chevre into bite-size pieces and sprinkle over beans. Top with toasted pignoli nuts and it's ready to serve.

POTATO SALAD WITH FETA CHEESE AND NICOISE OLIVES

Feta cheese and a mustard vinaigrette give a fresh new taste to potato salad.

Yield: 6-7 cups potato salad

Vinaigrette

1 tablespoon grainy Dijon mustard
Freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

For the salad

2 pounds red bliss potatoes
Coarse (kosher) salt
1 bunch scallions, white and unbruised green part, thinly sliced
3 tablespoons finely chopped, flat-leaf Italian parsley
1/4 pound feta cheese
2-3 tablespoons Nicoise olives

1. For the vinaigrette, place the mustard in a small mixing bowl, season with a few grinds of fresh pepper and whisk in the vinegar. Slowly whisk in olive oil until mixture is homogeneous.

2. Scrub potatoes in their jackets and place in salted boiling water to cover by a couple of inches. Simmer briskly for 16-18 minutes until tender but not falling apart when pierced with a knife. Drain in a colander and cut potatoes into 1/2-inch dice; pat dry then transfer to a large serving bowl. Pour over the vinaigrette while the potatoes are still warm and gently toss to coat.

3. Add scallions and parsley to the potatoes with a crumble of feta cheese and toss gently to mix. The salad can be prepared up to several hours ahead: refrigerate, covered, as necessary. When ready to serve, bring to room temperature and garnish with olives.

CHICKEN AND BROCCOLI SALAD WITH TARRAGON VINAIGRETTE

Creamy chunks of chicken and emerald green broccoli florets combine with tarragon vinaigrette for a hearty summer salad.

Serves 6-8

3 whole chicken breasts poached until tender*

Tarragon vinaigrette

1 clove garlic, finely chopped
3 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons tarragon wine vinegar
2 tablespoons fresh tarragon leaves
1/2 teaspoon salt
Freshly ground pepper
3/4-1 cup extra-virgin olive oil
2 teaspoons snipped chives or scallions
1-2 tablespoons light cream
2 tablespoons coarsely chopped toasted hazelnuts for garnish

1. Remove skin, bones and all fat from cooked chicken breasts and cut into 1-inch chunks. Trim broccoli into florets, rinse well and blanch for 1 1/2 minutes in boiling water. Drain, cool and pat dry in a clean kitchen towel. Set aside.

2. Place chopped garlic in mixing bowl or chop finely with several on/off pulses in a workbowl of food processor fitted with steel knife. Add mustard, vinegars, tarragon, salt and pepper, and stir or process to mix. Add oil in a thin stream into the bowl or through feed tube of processor and mix or process until mixture is thoroughly blended. Add cream and chives and stir or process to mix. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

3. Put broccoli in a large mixing bowl with chicken chunks. Add enough dressing to coat and toss gently. Reserve any leftover dressing. Cover and refrigerate salad (can be prepared up to one day ahead) until ready to serve.

4. Transfer salad to a large attractive serving bowl – glass or Lucite will show off the variety of ingredients – distributing the chicken and broccoli throughout. Sprinkle chopped toasted hazelnuts over the top.

*Note: Cook the chicken breasts on the bone in seasoned water for 16-18 minutes and you will have more tender and moist results than if using boneless skinless breasts.

Dining in the Hamptons

Birthdays Are A Cake Walk

There are always a lot of birthdays in the summer. A friend of mine thinks this might be because the winter is so boring, but regardless, I always find myself baking a lot of birthday cakes from June to August.

The summer's only just begun and I've already attended five June birthdays with at least six more to go in July and August. Obviously one of the great things about this is you get to go to many birthday parties and eat lots of birthday cake. But on the other hand, it's hard not to develop a strong distaste for birthday cake by summer's end. One can only go so far with different combinations of cake and frosting in standard vanilla and chocolate. Unfortunately, the overwhelming tendency when it comes to birthday cakes seems to be to opt for the easy, store-bought cake mix, if not a whole store-bought cake. It's understandable, but birthday cakes count in quality, not quantity. It is actually quite easy to bake delicious and sophisticated cakes just by adding a bit of jazz to Betty Crocker's recipe. In this way we reach a happy medium between slaving over a cake entirely from scratch and turning out another vanilla cake with chocolate icing.

I like to bake a different cake for each birthday. It's actually not that difficult to avoid repeating the same cake twice, especially when you consider the birthday cake personally for the birthday girl or boy. My first advice is not to waste your time baking a cake from scratch. With the right tricks any store-bought mix in a box can taste homemade.

The first step to creating that homemade taste is to replace the vegetable oil with butter. Without oil, the cake loses that cheap, airy taste and instead tastes rich and wholesome. But don't stop with just butter.

One of my most popular cakes was a coconut-lime chocolate cake. To add a mouthwatering hint of lime and unsurpassed moistness to your cake, squeeze 2-3 small limes into the mix, as well as their zests. Then add as much coconut as you like and bake according to the directions on the box.

Another favorite is a vanilla cake made the same way, but with oranges instead of limes and perhaps a splash of orange liqueur. These additions may play around with the chemistry of the cake batter a bit and your cake may be more moist than usual, so just be delicate when you take it out of the oven.

Frosting also plays a major role in making a cake that will dance with the taste buds. But keep in mind details are what make the difference between something boring and something that tastes professional. For the chocolate coconut-lime cake, one mouth-watering option is caramelized coconut in the center and on top of the cake. To make this crunchy morsel, sauté coconut shavings in butter and brown-sugar until it is golden brown and clumps together. You could also make a lime glaze of boiled lime juice and confectioner's sugar to drizzle on top of the chocolate cake.

For the vanilla cake I like to generously spread raspberry jam in the middle and ice the cake with a white chocolate frosting (an easy recipe can be found on the box of Baker's chocolate).

Finally, the cake's decoration can be what really impresses everyone at the birthday party. Incorporating the cake's ingredients in the decoration is always a winner. For the chocolate-lime cake for example, sliced limes along the edge of the cake dresses your dessert up so it could pass for one of Martha's. Fresh flowers from the garden also always look nice and with candles and writing, your cake will shine. Make this summer different and look forward to each new birthday cake!

It's not difficult at all to bake a memorable birthday cake. Everyone will love you and you won't be sick of birthday cake by the end of the summer!

Dining in the Hamptons

Almondito Restaurant needs no elaborate introduction. If you haven't visited this upbeat Mexican hotspot since its opening in 2005, you have likely heard effusive reviews, or at least passed the bustling building on Montauk Highway, which is perpetually swarmed with cars.

Despite its popularity, Almondito doesn't exude that haughty air too common among it-list establishments. Instead it maintains a casual elegance, boisterous and full of energy.

It has been a week since Robin, my friend and fellow food critic, and I enjoyed our feast and I returned a few evenings later for what I believed might be a brief visit. My intentions were to pick up a copy of the menu, gather some information and then go home to diligently write this review.

So let it be a nod to this restaurant that I found myself, hours later, voraciously gobbling down guacamole with a fork, sipping a mojito and chatting with some swanky strangers. The pungent aromas bring back memories of jicama, jalapeno, poblano chilis, fresh ceviche, oven-fresh tortillas, flavor-infused rib-eye steak. Suddenly, I was tempted to stay on.

Judging by the mass of sun-kissed diners flooding in through the doors, I am not the only one drawn to this sprightly fiesta. The dining area is crowded with well-dressed families, handsome couples, girls holding drinks in impressive shades of lime green and pink. There are eager people lined up at the door on tiptoes, hoping to snag a table.

Almondito is owned by Eric Lemonides and Jason Weiner, the same amicable duo that runs Almond, the French bistro in Bridgehampton. While this legacy might be the initial draw, it is cuisine that lures me back. It is a refined take on traditional, rustic cuisine. Lighter, more delicate dishes, like sugar cane skewered shrimp in habanero, banana leaf wrapped tilapia, or achiote rubbed salmon, allow a diner to leave without that lead-belly, burrito-stuffed feeling. More elaborate creations like the tamarind glazed pork shank, accompanied by plump apricots, add more personality to the menu, especially paired with fresh jicama salads or cool gazpacho.

The décor adds to the fresh feeling of the place, with sprawling open spaces and eclectic adornments, like Aztec pendants, futuristic ceiling lamps (inspired by Mexican beaten tin ware) and a hanging mesh curtain of industrial steel. A playful group of flowers made of paper add dashes of bright colors to the bar area.

The cocktail list is extensive, with a slew of margaritas and mixed cocktails in zesty summer flavors. We chose the "Watermelon Smash," which our very attentive waitress, Diane, delivered with a smile, accompanied by warm tortilla chips and guacamole. (Guacamole that tempts me to use superlatives!) It was full-bodied and intoxicating, with huge chunks of tender avocado, subtle cilantro hints and not a squeeze of lime that wasn't called for. We started off casually dipping chips but soon enough were gorging by the forkful.

Next arrived a ceviche selection with an Acapulco-style shrimp cocktail and marinated scallops dressed in a yellow-tomato saffron coulis. My favorite was the striped bass ceviche. These thin slices of tilapia were doused in a subtle lime marinade and piled with a finely chopped mixture of avocado. In dishes such as these, I found the simpler preparations were harmonious with the high-quality ingredients that demand little adornment.

At the same time, sophisticated flavor medleys and dramatic spices made a lasting impression with richer dishes, such as the duck confit tamale. The smoky taste and jolt of chili sauce were explosive, the duck was rich and flavorful and thus not overpowered. Other impressive appetizers are the creamy and delicious rock shrimp and the light empanadas filled with spicy barbecued pork and served with a tangy papaya chimichurri sauce.

For my main course, I ordered the Chimichurri grilled rib eye, a veritable haunch of tender meat served with crisped onions and dressed with a charred corn and avocado salsita. While impressed by the meat, I found the accompaniments and seasoning were a bit busy and overpowering.

Besides these, there is skirt steak Asada, with chili butter, yucca cake and guacamole. Another choice is a chicken coated with a deep brown mole poblano, a classic chocolate, pumpkin-seed sauce with an earthy, unexpected flavor.

There was a distinct peak to this meal that I would like to end this article with, a dish I can't forget. This tilapia fillet was neatly packaged in an elegant fold of banana leaves and presented in a woven basket with sticky rice and spinach, and served in a light white wine and garlic broth, with hints of olive, tomato, jalapeno and fresh oregano. Upon her first taste, Robin exuberantly described it as "everything I've ever wanted, all wrapped up in a banana leaf."

Dining in the Hamptons

Now that summer is in full swing, take time to slow down to see what is happening on the East End!

On the North Fork head over to The Lenz Winery, in Peconic, on July 8th from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. for a multi-ethnic taste of the American grill. David Rosengarten, world-renowned food and wine authority, will be presenting a cooking demonstration and wine tasting with a menu of dishes influenced by the ethnic melting pot of America. Guests will be able to taste each dish and a selection of Lenz wines. The cost is $60 per person. For more information call (631) 734-6010 or go to www.lenzwine.com. Also on the North Fork check out the wine and oyster tasting benefit at Jamesport Vineyards. The tasting and benefit will be held on Sunday, July 9th, from 1 to 5 p.m. The benefit is for SPAT, the Southold Project in Aquaculture Training. Tickets for the raw bar and wine tasting can be purchased on site. Call (631) 852-8660 or (631) 722-5256 or go to www.jamesport-vineyards.com.

Aqua East, in Montauk, is pleased to announce the launching of "flights of fancy," a three-course prix fixe dinner every Monday from 5 to 10 p.m. The $29 menu includes two appetizers and a main course. The $7 wine flights include three glasses of wine paired with the three-course meal. On Monday, July 10, the featured wine will be from Long Island's Lieb Cellars including a Bridge Lane Rosé, Reserve Chardonnay and Reserve Merlot. For reservations or further information please call Aqua East at (631) 668-4147 or visit www.aquaeastmontauk.com.

Looking to get some exercise before chowing down? On Monday, July 10th, join the Group for the South Fork for a one-mile paddle down Sag Pond to the beach, where there will be a fish BBQ, bonfire and sunset, weather permitting. Then paddle back by the light of the moon. The fee for the BBQ is $20 for adults and $10 for kids under 12 and they will also have boat rentals available. For more details call (631) 537-1400 # 23 or go to www.groupforthesouthfork.org.

Almondito, in East Hampton, is now offering new menu items for the summer season. A sampling of the menu includes: gazpacho amarillo with lump crab and tempura squash blossom; "green" striped bass with lime and chimichurri verde; adobo marinated, grilled pork chop with tomato avocado salad and plantain chips. For more information or a full menu call (631) 329-6700.

Turtle Crossing, in East Hampton, is now offering full service catering for events from weddings to kiddie parties. They can provide everything from tents, staffing, music, equipment, entertainment and flowers to a down home BBQ fare, of course. For a consultation or more information on the restaurant call (631) 324-7166.

In Sag Harbor, check out The Beacon, which is now open seven days a week for dinner, which they are serving Sunday thru Thursday from 6 to 10 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 6 to 11 p.m. Some menu items are tuna tartare with capers, whole grain mustard, cucumber, red curry paste and mixed greens; sesame crusted tuna with Napa cabbage-jicama slaw and Asian glaze. For reservations or more info call (631) 725-7088.

Looking for a wild Wednesday? Then head over to JL East in East Hampton. Every Wednesday they will feature complimentary brick-oven international pizzas at the bar and a live DJ. They are also now open seven days a week for dinner. For more details call (631) 321-1100. At Alison, in Bridgehampton, they have a whole new bar menu for hungry bellies. They will be offering items such as open face soft shell crab "BLT" on pancetta with basil aioli and marinated tomatoes; a crayfish, lobster and oyster fricassee with summer beans, zucchini, spinach and lobster jus. For more information call (631) 537-7100.

At the Hamptons Wine & Food Festival, the American Express Hamptons Tasting Tables will feature top Hamptons restaurants offering small samples of a signature dish in the Grand Tasting Hall on Saturday, August 12th, from 6 to 9 p.m. and Sunday, August 13th, from 1 to 5 p.m. The restaurants participating are 1770 House, Alison, Almond, East Hampton Point, Inn Spot on the Bay, JL East, JLN Bistro, Nick and Toni's, Pacific East, Southampton Publick House, and Tierra Mar. The festival will take place August 11th thru August 13th. For more information you can contact Stuart Racey at (516) 944-0026 or by email at sracey@optonline.net. # SUMMER SPORTS

Take Me Out To The Ball Game

Hey, man, it's summertime. I can't believe it either. We are all moving way too fast in the fast lane and need to stop for a second and embrace it. Which is why you should get out there and play a pick up game of softball. Just do it. Grab your old mitt that you have saved in your bedroom since your glory days of Little League, call up some buddies and play. There is absolutely nothing stopping you.

Softball is a great American passtime and it is celebrated out here. There are dozens of leagues that play during the summertime and it is worth it to go to their games and check them out. They are also worth joining, if you have the time for it.

If you don't have the time to join a softball league there is no need to worry. Softball can be played any time and almost anywhere (assuming that you have a large enough backyard). All you need to do is make some phone calls, buy some cold drinks, and meet someplace where you can play.

If you can't find enough players to play a pick up game of softball, just go to any of the public fields that are spread out in every village and start throwing the ball around. Nothing will bring you back to the days of your youth better. However, be sure to really stretch before you start having a game of catch. You will be amazed at how many muscles you work when you throw a softball. There are muscles that you didn't even know that you had that will hurt the next day if you are not careful. Be sure to stretch out your throwing arm well, but also make sure you stretch out your hamstrings, your quads, your calves and your groin. All of these muscles go to work, even when you are having just a simple game of catch. The last thing that you want to have happen is a pulled muscle. Walking around in pain from having a simple game of catch brings your coolness level down pretty far.

But if you want to organize a game between the company you work for and another company, or if you want to take over a ball field on a Saturday evening, permission needs to be given. The way to take care of this is to call the town hall that the field is in or the school that it is in. For example, if you want to use the East Hampton High School softball field for a game, you have to call the high school and get a permit for the field. All that needs to happen is that it gets approved in advance. However, make sure you do this at least two weeks in advance because if the school board meets only once a month, you want to time your application to be on their table before your game takes place.

Usually insurance is necessary to reserve a ball field. But this should not stop you in your tracks. Most companies already have the insurance, and it just needs to be faxed over as soon as possible.

Softball is by far a better game than Wiffle ball, which is a game that can also be played just about anywhere, but is way more boring than a good game of competitive softball. You'd be surprised what you may read about in some publications about Wiffle ball. Usually the writers that write good things about Wiffle ball are crazy, drink cold coffee, and get bad haircuts. Strange, bowl-like, Wiffle ball haircuts.

Going to watch a softball game is a great way to spend part of the evening. You will be amazed at how competitive the Montauk and East Hampton softball leagues get. They are usually out in Lion's Field in Montauk or in East Hampton. The more spectators the better and usually there are quite a few people there, so don't hesitate to go.

When you get out there for a good game of clean fun, bring the kids along, they won't forget it and almost always something funny happens at a game or even when just playing catch. Get out there!

SUMMER SPORTS

Leave Me Home For The Ball Game

Wiffle ball is by far the perfect summer sport, far better than softball, anyway. The game is inexpensive and does not require more than two players to play; not to mention wiffle ball can be played in almost any location. So grab a friend, pick up a bat and ball, and get cracking.

The most convenient place to play wiffle ball is in your very own backyard, with all the comforts of home. The best part about playing at your house is that you are capable of taking a drink or snack break whenever you fancy. Heck, you can even eat breakfast, lunch, or dinner between innings. Now that's what I call a good time.

Try playing softball at home. I can foresee your future. Someone will step up to the plate, which is made of ripped up grass from your backyard, take a swing, pull the ball, and it will land inside your neighbor's house, crashing through their window. That is if you're lucky enough not to break your own window. This scenario is no fun at all. The homeowner of the backyard you are playing at will be upset that their grass is ripped up, your neighbor will be livid that their window is broken, and you will be out $400 since you will have to replace the window.

Another advantage of wiffle ball is that a bat will only set you back about $5, including the ball. Try purchasing a softball bat. Those things can be as expensive as $300, if you're lucky, and I almost forgot, a softball might cost you another $6. That's right, an individual softball can be more expensive than the entire wiffle ball set.

And don't get me started on the rules. Wiffle ball may have the simplest rules around. With a lawn chair as home plate, you can keep track of balls and strikes depending on whether or not the pitcher hits or misses the chair. This certainly saves lots of arguments that could be had when playing softball with an umpire. After all, how can you argue with a chair?

Besides balls and strikes, singles, doubles, triples, and home runs are based upon the distance the batter is able to hit the ball. Outs are recorded when a batter strikes out, a fielder catches the ball on a fly, or when a player fields a ground ball cleanly without it passing him. Wiffle ball is often played with two outs to keep the game moving.

On the other hand, softball has more rules than the United States Constitution. For starters, the game must be played on a field that has 60 feet between bases. The pitcher's mound is normally around 35 to 40 feet away from home plate. With wiffle ball, the mound can be on a sprinkler head, a stick on the lawn, or wherever you want. That aside, softball is played with three strikes, four balls, and three outs. It is a pretty uptight game when you think about it. A team needs at least 9 players, totaling 18 people for a game. Wiffle ball can be played with two people or 20 if you want. However, the cherry on top of this sundae has to be that softball fields normally require a permit from the town to play on the field. You can't just show up and play softball, legally that is, if you get the urge.

And don't get me started on injuries. Softball is a game filled with injuries. How often do you hear stories of people who were playing softball when they were younger and they got hit in the face with the metal bat? I know I've heard quite a few of those stories. Then there are the broken bones. Legs, fingers, arms, feet, and even your nose are all in jeopardy anytime you step on the field. When was the last time you heard of someone getting injured when they were playing wiffle ball?

In all honesty, if you get injured playing wiffle ball that is an accomplishment, something to write home about. It's not everyday that you can say that you twisted your leg playing wiffle ball when you tripped on a rock and fell down, while still making the catch.

As for me, I think I'm going to save my money, time, and body from injuries this summer and stick with playing wiffle ball, how about you?

SUMMER SPORTS

1-2-3 Not IT!

There aren't very good TV shows in the summer because the world is active from June to August. Sports are just a part of summer and there is even a game for those who are not particularly athletic and coordinated. Actually, there are lots of games: Sharks and Minnows, Categories, Initials, Marco Polo – pool games!

I love pool games. If I could, I'd stay in the pool till my whole body is wrinkled, but I don't think that's possible, as we'd have a lot of raisin people among us. Just the other day I didn't have anyone my own age to play with, so I raced back and forth in the pool with a six-year-old (and I was totally beating him).

My favorite pool games are the ones that combine mind and body, like Initials. Initials is so fun that you can even play it with just two people. The person who is "It" stands in the shallow end of the pool and says the initials to the title of a movie. Everyone else who is playing waits at the other end of the pool and if there is a deep-end, they usually stand at the edge of the pool in ready position.

These people can ask for hints if they don't know what the heck B.I.O. is and then, for instance, the person who is It might chant, "Brrrr, it's cold in here." Then, if you're cultured enough to know that it is Bring it On, you would dive in the pool and race as fast as you can. Contact is allowed if someone is on your tail (no dunking though), to the shallow end of the pool. If you happen to get all the way to the other end, and to your dismay, you are wrong, you have to swim back to the other end of the pool before you can guess again. Let me just say, I love this game.

A pool game similar to Initials is Categories. Most people know how to play Categories, but just in case, let me refresh your memory. Set yourselves up in the same way as for Initials except at the opposite end of the pool. Now, the person who is It waits on the edge of the deep-end with his back to the other players. If you're It, you get to pick the category. For example, if I am It and I choose "kinds of meat" for the category, the little minions waiting in the shallow end will whisper together, each person claiming a kind of meat. While the person who is It lists off, "ham, pork, bacon, venison..." with his or her back turned, each person in the shallow end slowly (and stealthily, if you know what's good for you) swims to the deep end of the pool. You have to get to the other end of the pool when your kind of meat is called, but the trick is that the person who is It gets to turn around after every five pieces of meat and if they see you trying to touch their end of the pool they'll jump in and tag you! This is a fun one, too.

This next pool game still needs a title because I keep calling it, "the game where you jump off the diving board, answer a trivia question, and catch a ball." I don't think I really need to explain how to play this game, but one tip is whoever is throwing the ball, start asking the question before they go for the running leap into the pool, otherwise they won't be able to answer before they hit the water. Actually, they probably won't be able to answer regardless, I usually get too excited and flustered to even utter "Shiloh" to such an easy question (the Jolie-Pitt baby).

Then there's Sharks and Minnows and Marco Polo. A lot of people love these games; how could you not when probably every summer camp in America drills them into your system? But, don't think that just because you played it in summer camp it's kid stuff. A friend of mine says playing Sharks and Minnows is all they did in college.

Swimming is great exercise, so you can either spend the day swimming back and forth in monotonous laps, or you can swim back and forth, but with the purpose to be the ultimate pool game champion.

Spineless Monsters

The Fourth of July weekend has come and gone, marking the unofficial start of summer. The water is warm enough to spend hours in, the beaches are bustling and the sun is hot. There are plenty of wonderful aspects to summertime life, but there is one ominous creature that lurks in the water waiting for us to take a dip. Between surfing, skimboarding, snorkeling, tubing, waterskiing, and long relaxing drifts in the tide, you are bound to encounter this nuisance. The jellyfish. The lazy bully of the sea. They drift in the current, too stupid to even choose their direction and they sting whatever they happen to bump into without discretion. I see absolutely no reason for their existence at all. Jellyfish do, however, help you find out who your true friends are, because when you get stung and you look around at your buddies to see who will pee on you, then the real feelings come out. That's when true characters are really revealed. Jellyfish can ruin your day in the water, but like all living things, jellyfish do, of course, serve a purpose. They are crucial to the marine ecosystem and we should learn about them and, more importantly, the treatment of their stings for the summer.

The jellyfish is a marine invertebrate with no brain or sensory organs. Its body is about 96 percent water. The jellyfish's digestive system is not highly developed, meaning that it uses the same organ for food intake and waste expulsion. Most jellyfish feed on microscopic zooplankton and small fish that become caught in their tentacles. Their tentacles, which are what make them such an annoyance to us, are covered with stinging cells called cnidocytes. They do not need a respiratory system since their skin is thin enough for oxygen to easily diffuse in and out of their bodies. The jellyfish's familiar bell-like shape is not very hydrodynamic, making them very inefficient swimmers, but they use their shape to drift around and capture passing currents. Jellyfish have limited control over their movement and mostly free-float, but they can rhythmically open and close their bell-shaped bodies to create a flow of water through their tentacles, bringing food to them. These drifters can be found in just about any body of water in the world, where they encounter unsuspecting swimmers like you and me.

When we encounter a jellyfish, its thousands of arms tangle around us and release stinging barbs. Their tentacles are covered in multitudes of microscopic nematocysts, each with a trigger and a capsule containing a coiled stinging filament with a barbed end. Upon contact with a fish or human skin, the filament will unwind like a coiled spring, launch into the target, and inject toxins. Most jellyfish are not highly toxic to humans, but some can be deadly. Jellyfish are also capable of congregating into large swarms or "blooms" consisting of hundreds or even thousands of individuals. The formation of these blooms is a complex process that depends on ocean currents, nutrients, temperature, and oxygen content.

Inevitably, we will all get stung by a jellyfish during one of our dips in the water. When this does happen, there are many ways to treat the sting. Depending on the severity of the sting, you may need some minor first aid. The jellyfish around this area are not deadly, but the box jellyfish is often labeled as the most venomous of any creature in the world. Their stings may be fatal. Serious stings can cause anaphylactic shock and in some cases, paralysis. For the average sting, there are a few things you will want to do: protect yourself from getting stung yourself as you assist the victim, deactivate the stinging cells, and remove the tentacles. To prevent injury to rescuers, barrier clothing should be worn. This protection may include anything from panty hose to wet suits to full-body, sting-proof suits. Inactivating the nematocysts, or stinging cells, prevents further injection of venom into the patient. Five percent acetic acid solution (white vinegar) is the preferred method, although meat tenderizer or sodium bicarbonate (baking soda) will neutralize any nematocysts that have not yet discharged into the skin. Meat tenderizer should not be left on the skin for more than 15 minutes and none of these substances should be used in the eyes. In the case of stings on or around the eyes, the solution may be placed on a towel and dabbed around the eyes, but not in them. Salt water may also be used in case any of these compounds are not readily available, but fresh water should never be used. Despite what we all think, urine on the sting will encourage the release of venom. Also, rinsing the sting site with fresh water, rubbing the wound, or using alcohol or ammonia will also release more venom. Once deactivated, the stinging cells must be removed. This can be accomplished by carefully picking off tentacles left on the body. You should be careful to use gloves to prevent personal injury. After large pieces of the jellyfish are removed, a knife edge, safety razor, or credit card may be used to take away any remaining nematocysts. Don't panic when you get stung by a jellyfish this summer. Just treat the sting calmly and find a new way to determine who your real friends are.

Inspirations by Emily J Weitz

The Air We Breathe

This last stretch of time in the city was a long one. It felt like I would never have the chance to just get myself out to the beach and soak in the salty air. It was all city sidewalks, it was all outdoor cafes. And don't get me wrong: the city has my heart too, and it's inspiration to simply exist at the collision of so many cultures, so many lives. But when that Long Island Rail Road train carries me through the burned forests of Westhampton Beach, past the open fields of Bridgehampton, and into the sun-swept streets of East Hampton, I feel rejuvenated. I step off the platform, and life slows down.

Granted, there is an influx of city people so fierce, it sometimes seems like the city itself has emptied out onto these pristine beaches. When I was out here full time, it certainly felt that way to me. "Here come the tourists," I thought. "Here come the weekenders."

But now that I've become one of them, if only for a time, I remember why they come. I remember that it's not the famed Hamptons scene that draws out most of these luggage-toting passengers. It's literally something in the air. It's that sensation of calm that soaks your senses when you stand on Georgica Beach in the moonlight. It's nature's harmony exemplified in a thriving ecosystem at Louse Point. Birds diving for crabs scampering on sand, sprouting beach grass, housing crabs, feeding birds. It's standing there quietly, breathing it in, being a part of it.

So what is in this magical air we breathe here, which lingers in our lungs so distinctly? The higher salt content in the air opens the capillaries, bathing your lungs in refreshing enzymes. People purchase all sorts of salt solutions for exactly this reason. For example, ionizing salt lamps are supposed to help counteract allergies. Salt baths are thought to cure skin ailments and respiratory illness. Therefore, it stands to reason that the salty ocean air, which we on the East End we are lucky enough to breathe in every day, rejuvenates us. Pure, salt-infused air seeps deep into the lungs, and one slow breath feels like a long bath in a fresh spring.

The inside of a lung is much like a sponge. There are about 300 million tiny pockets, called capillaries. The capillaries make up about seventy square yards of surface area, where gases are absorbed in and out of the bloodstream. An average adult breathes about 16 times per minute, taking in about one pint of air per breath. This intake adds up to about 2,000 gallons of air per day! When the person in question is taking in 2,000 gallons of air, it would certainly be beneficial for it to be pure air, like the kind we breathe here, where the roads may be crowded, but the ocean is endless.

Today I was in a yoga class and my teacher, Jennifer Frasher, likened breathing to drinking. She said, "When you take in this next breath, think of it as drinking something sweet." I inhaled deeply as the ocean breeze swept through the open window. I imagined a light honey drink sliding down my throat and filling me. It was then that I realized the air here does have a sweet, rich quality. It spurs me to escape the air conditioning and to inhale deeply on the beach.

The city tickles all the senses, and I often find myself skipping down the sidewalk or staring in awe towards the sky. But one thing that will always draw me back is the healthy sensation of purity that I get when I step onto the cool sand at sunset, take a deep breath in, and absorb.

Chocolate: Nature's Candy And Cure

Dark chocolate, milk chocolate, chocolate chip cookies, mocha ice cream, chocolate fudge cake... It is safe to say that I'm a chocoholic. But really, who isn't? It's such a multitasking food – great for celebrations, perfect for a pick-me-up, comforting in a crisis – who can't find a time when chocolate fits the occasion?

So you can imagine my delight when new research revealed that chocolate could actually be beneficial to our health. This news is even better than finding out that drinking wine and coffee may not be the vice everyone thinks it to be.

So just how is it that chocolate has transformed itself from a forbidden food to a friendly one? The answer lies in its flavanoids. Flavanoids are naturally-occurring compounds found in plant-based foods. Common in foods like red wine, cranberries, apples, and peanuts, flavanoids work as antioxidants in the body, protecting it from damage caused by things such as cigarette smoke. The flavanoids in chocolate are called flavanols. The compounds prevent fat-like substances from clogging the arteries. Additionally, flavanols positively affect the balance of certain hormones, including eicosanoids, which researchers believe help improve cardiovascular health.

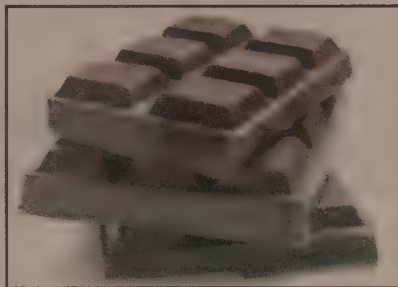

On the chocolate spectrum, certain kinds are better for you than others. Leading the list is pure dark chocolate, which appears to retain the highest levels of flavanols of all kinds of chocolate. Chocolate has a naturally pungent taste, given by the flavanols. The more chocolate is processed, generally to lessen this bitter taste, the more flavanols are lost. Chocolate syrup loses most flavanols as it is formed. Cocoa powder starts off with plenty of flavanols, containing about as many as in dark chocolate, but unless you eat it straight out of the container, it won't really help you. When mixed with milk and sugar to make hot chocolate, the flavanol level drops significantly, to about half that in milk chocolate, which has a low level of flavanols.

Studies have also found that cocoa helps the body process nitric oxide, which promotes healthy blood flow and good blood pressure. Interestingly, researchers discovered that the residents of an island called Kuna in Panama drink about five cups of cocoa each day and include it in many recipes, but few of these people seem to have high blood pressure. This apparent phenomenon has inspired much research into chocolate's health benefits.

Better yet, that euphoric feeling you get from eating chocolate? Not in your head. Chocolate is a natural analgesic and consumption of chocolatey foods triggers the body's production of natural opiates. It works in the same way as marijuana, only on a much lower (and legal) level. Also interesting, the stimulants in chocolate lessen anxiety by encouraging the body to produce serotonin and can also promote the production of endorphins, which help dull pain sensations. Plus, chocolate contains caffeine, serving as an alternative source to coffee, though not as strong. Which means a piece of chocolate in the evening can help you stay up for that extra hour without keeping you awake all night, as a late-night cup of java might.

Finally, flavanol-rich cocoa and low-dose aspirin act

similarly in promoting healthy blood flow. Both seem to prevent platelets from clotting, thus restricting proper blood flow. In turn, less clotting leads to fewer strokes and heart attacks. While experts don't recommend replacing aspirin with chocolate, it could be a good alternative for those unable to take aspirin.

More encouragement to enjoy your chocolate fix comes from one of the top schools in the nation.

Researchers from the Harvard School of Public Health found that those who eat chocolate and sweets up to three times each month live almost a year longer than those who eat too much or those who steer clear of junk altogether.

Alas, all good things must come to an end and this is also the case here. While chocolate may be healthier than we once believed, this doesn't mean that you should drop all other foods from your diet or consume any form of chocolate that strikes your fancy. Those chocolate concoctions mixing chocolate with nuts and marshmallows and coconut and caramel are still bad for you, and these kinds of delectables are the foods that perpetuate the myth of chocolate's sinful image. The other ingredients are what add the extra-unwanted fat and calories, so it's better to just keep your intake to small pieces of dark chocolate every so often. It seems that a piece of chocolate a day keeps the doctor away, and to us chocoholics, that sounds far better than the proverbial apple.

The Sweetest Remedy of All

We all know that a spoonful of sugar makes the medicine go down, but have you ever paused to consider that the spoonful of sugar may be the medicine? In the case of honey local to your region helping to cure seasonal allergies, it just may be so. I am a long time allergy sufferer. Every summer I get the classic symptoms: itchy throat and eyes, head and chest congestion, and stuffy nose. While I am also allergic to dust and cats, pollen is the main cause of my suffering. I usually take an arsenal of Claritin, Allegra, Visine and Benadryl without much success. I end up spending three months straight with annoying cold-like symptoms. I have contemplated the series of allergy shots that most doctors and all allergists recommend. But I am put off by the idea of multiple visits, needles and expense. There may be, however, one more alternative. The use of local honey as a "vaccine" for allergies has been rumored for years, but not much is known about it, though multiple testimonials prove that local honey is a useful and natural tool in the fight against allergies.

Local honey is said to be an aid in alleviating allergy symptoms, but does not tout itself as a cure for allergies. The logic behind the use of local honey is much like the use of a vaccine; if you give the body a very small amount of what it is allergic to, then it will start to naturally build antibodies. If you are eating local honey it has bits of local pollen in it. People develop allergies after continued overexposure to the same allergens; it could be grass, any tree, or specific flowers. These plants are amphipilous, meaning that they are pollinated by both insects and wind. The wind pollination would explain the allergy sufferer's overexposure, while the bee pollination is responsible for the honey's medicinal qualities. Local honey will contain pollen from the same types of plants that you find in your backyard. This will boost your immune system quite effectively.

To get the most healing benefits, the honey should be as local as possible. You want the honey to have been made by bees that have been pollinating the plants in your area, because that honey will have trace amounts of exactly what you are allergic to. The way to maximize the healing effects of local honey is to take a couple of teaspoons every day for a few months before the allergy season. This is necessary to gain the immune system's boosting effect.

Interestingly, the series of honey doses has an effect on the body that is very similar to allergy shots. When taken in small manageable amounts the trigger for allergies (pollen) has a healing effect. Honey is a much easier and less expensive solution to allergies. It is difficult to fit multiple office visits into your schedule, difficult to convince a child to get a series of shots, and difficult to cover the expenses of these procedures. Honey is much easier to take in many ways. And I always advocate using a natural solution when available. It seems that we are all a little over-medicated these days.

Though local honey has been reported to be amazingly effective, it is still not understood why. Very little research has been done on the health benefits of honey and maximizing its potential. Pharmaceutical companies don't seem interested in funding extensive research and studies into something that would take away from their profits. Most of the information we have is anecdotal or family tradition, yet it can be very useful. Allergy sufferers claim that after eating local honey for four months, their allergy symptoms began to be relieved within the first month. Allergy sufferers, who have followed a course of local honey treatments, report that their relief will last for up to 10 years. If their symptoms do return, they simply take more honey. Local honey will not necessarily replace doctors or medications, but it offers a natural and inexpensive alternative to a series of immunology shots. It is worth giving this solution a try before we add one more daily pill to our arsenal.

For local honey, try The Hamptons Honey Company. These producers are dedicated towards saving the honeybee and tout honey as the "gourmet medicine," which cures anything from allergies to indigestion. For more information go to www.hamptonshoney.com.

Blink Like An Egyptian

The look achieved by a flawlessly drawn line of liquid eyeliner is one of classic sophistication. A perfect sweep of liquid eyeliner is the signature look of some of the most enigmatic and alluring women in history. The practice of using liquid eyeliner dates back centuries to the women of ancient Egypt, whose kohl-rimmed eyes were royal fashion. When the film Cleopatra was released, starring a heavily outlined Elizabeth Taylor, women's obsessions with the look of liquid eyeliner hit its peak. Many women emulate this look today with good intentions, but with terrible results. Liquid eyeliner is a makeup that is notoriously hard to master and many women walk around with the false belief that they are applying it correctly and look just like Elizabeth Taylor. These women are wrong and someone needs to say something. My personal obsession with liquid eyeliner makes it hard for me to watch it being misused so frequently. When applied properly, the look of liquid eyeliner can be stunning, timeless, and sexy. Years of mess-ups and magnifying mirrors have taught me more than I care to admit about liquid eyeliner and as the public seems to be in dire need of my insight, I will share it with you.

First, I believe that people should not be afraid of liquid eyeliner. Everyone should try at least once for a glamorous night out. Liquid eyeliner is suitable for all ages, styles, and social situations. From punks to pearls, debutants to delinquents, liquid eyeliner will complete your look.

To begin, you'll need to know what to buy. There are basically two routes you can go: the liquid eyeliner brush, which unscrews from a little inkpot-like base of pigment, or the felt tip eyeliner pen, which has the pigment within it. I vastly recommend the latter of the two as it gives you one-handed application and has the feel of a pen, which we are all comfortable writing with. As far as color goes, choose based on your skin and the severity of the look you want. I never use true black, but rather a very dark brown. For beginners I recommend using some tone of brown. People often associate liquid eyeliner with a striking and intense black line, but the look can be much more subtle.

Take your new purchase home and don't plan on going anywhere for a while and don't plan on debuting your new look for quite a while longer. Lots of practice is required if you want to wear liquid eyeliner and not look foolish. Sit down when you have some free time on your hands in front of a good, well-lit mirror. Unless you're a pro like me, don't think that you can dash off to a party immediately. You'll only get frustrated and give up. Use this time to apply and remove your eyeliner several times until you get a feel for it. While you are sitting and practicing, there are some tips you'll want to know and some situations you will likely encounter.

There are some eye shapes that liquid eyeliner doesn't flatter. Heavy lidded eyes, small eyes, or eyes that slant down at the outer corner should stay away from liquid eyeliner – it will make your eyes look droopy or sleepy. For everyone else, there will be plenty of problems ahead, the most difficult of which will be keeping the lines even, smooth, and symmetrical. Start by tilting your head back and looking down into the mirror. I pull my eyelid a little taut to draw the line, but be careful because this stretches the skin so your final line will not look exactly like the line you originally drew. You'll want to practice until you have a steady, confident hand and a smooth, sweeping application.

One of the worst mistakes you can make is to leave a gap between the lashline and the eyeliner. Plenty of women walk around with this horrible look. When I encounter one I can't even have a conversation because I am so distracted by the overwhelming desire to fix it for them. To avoid this, be very careful to apply the liner directly along the lashline. Aim to draw the line directly on the base of the lashes, rather than on the lid. If there is a little gap between the liquid eyeliner and your lashes, fill it in with your regular eye pencil, then curl your lashes and apply mascara. This will conceal your mistake.

Another very visible mistake that women make is having the end, and more commonly, the beginning of the liquid eyeliner line look blunt and stubby. This is an easy mistake to make because liquid eyeliner is such a bold cosmetic item. This can be avoided by staying very close to the lashes and using your regular eye pencil to draw a softer beginning to the line.

Once you have drawn a smooth and even line, you must tackle the slight upturn of the line that gives it its classic, alluring appeal. I recommend just bringing the line to a small upwards-sweeping point, unless you are going for a specifically retro or dramatic look. The littlest upward flick of the eyeliner can provide the most flattering effect. Overdoing it is common and makes you look costume-y or crazy.

Most importantly, you must not open your eyes while the eyeliner is drying. If you open your eyes to admire your work too early, the wet line will transfer to your eyelid and leave you with a lovely drag-queen look. Just be patient.

When wearing liquid eyeliner, I recommend a mostly neutral face to accompany it. Beige eye shadow, a little bronzer or blush, and mascara are all you need (think Audrey Hepburn). Liquid eyeliner is a bold and sexy statement, let it speak for itself, and not be overwhelmed by other makeup.

Master this makeup trick and you will use it with much success for many years to come. Liquid eyeliner will set you apart from the crowd and refine your look. A woman's eyes reveal so much about her – take a little time today to invest in your personal style. Liquid eyeliner defines your best feature and adds depth and intrigue. There is an interesting social history that we associate with a beautiful sweep of dark eyeliner. We think of mystery, power, and allure when we see a defined eye. Join the ranks of beautiful women throughout history who have based their entire style around the look of liquid eyeliner and see what it feels like to be just as glamorous as them.

Go Sunless For The Season

Hamptonites are lucky to have the most gorgeous beaches in the nation right around the corner. When the sun is shining and I am not working, the only thing on my mind is getting to the beach. It is the beginning of July and most people have already achieved the perfect tan; a deep golden color, not too dark, but not too light. Nowadays, with the invention of sunless tanning lotion and skin toner enhancers, you do not have to spend hours in the sun to get a great tan.

Choosing the right sunless tanning lotion and knowing how to apply it is very important. What is worst than walking around with a streaky, orange tan? Not much.

When shopping for sunless tanning lotion, do not get caught up in all the pretty gold bottles. There are many different brands and many different kinds of tanning lotions. Some tanning lotions will make your skin tan with multiple applications while others will give you a deep, dark color almost instantly. There are also tone enhancers which will enhance your tan and make your skin glow, but not make you very tan.

If you are looking for an instant tan with only one application, make sure you have some time to spare. You are going to have to make sure that the lotion dries correctly and fully. This may take forty minutes to an hour. A couple of products that I recommend are L'Oreal Sublime Bronze and Coppertone Endless Summer. The tanning lotions which you apply several times over the course of a week dry much faster, however, do not expect instant results. You may not see a difference in your tan until the second or third application. I recommend Banana Boat Summer Color and Jergens Natural Glow. Tone enhancers are similar to your daily moisturizer. They dry almost instantly and you do not need to worry too much about streaking. My favorites are L'Oreal Sublime Glow and MAC Body & Face Lotion.

When you are shopping for an instant tanning lotion, you will notice that it says "light skin tones," "medium skin tones" or "dark skin tones" on the front of the bottle. It is very important to buy the lotion with the tone that matches your current skin tone, not the tone that you want to achieve. I recommend not buying a lotion that is for dark tones unless you are really dark. If you buy a lotion which is for a deeper tone than your skin is currently, it will turn your skin orange.

No matter which lotion you choose, certain parts of your body will make the application process challenging. These places I call trouble zones. They include your hands, feet, ankle bones, elbows, and wrists. Make sure you rub in the lotion you apply to these areas. This will help prevent streaks. Lotion builds up in between your fingers. When you are done applying the lotion to your body, make sure you wash this area or else it will be darker than the rest of your hand. People often forget to put lotion in between or on the side of their toes. Your feet will look weird if there are large white spots. Your ankle bone and wrist are trouble zones because the skin there is elevated by a bone. Your elbow may give you problems because you are always bending your elbow, which forms a crease on the inside of the joint. Constantly rub the lotion in to prevent it from building up in one area and forming a streak. The outside of your elbow is challenging because your skin bunches up when you straighten your arm. When applying lotion to this area, bend your arm. If your skin is dry and you notice streaks, there is no way to correct it. It will not wash off. The moral of the story is to watch your skin dry and rub in the spots that are not drying as fast as the rest of your body. You may have applied more lotion to one area of your body and not noticed. Rubbing in these areas, you will help prevent streaks.

If you are stuck in the office and are jealous of everyone who is tanner than you, go to your local drug store and pick up a bottle of sunless tanning lotion. Just because someone is tan, does not mean they had to go to the beach or sit outside for hours lathering their body with tanning oil. My dermatologist told me that sunless tanners are actually the best way to get tan. Tanning booths have negative effects on your skin and so does the sun. Morning, noon, or night, get the perfect summer glow in the convenience of your home with sunless tanning lotion!

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

The Allure of Lilies

Over the last dozen years, the collection of Asiatic and Oriental lilies at Rock Cottage has grown and thrived. Lilies grow wherever there is a sunny spot in the perennial borders. They punctuate the garden with their magnificent blooms and heady scents. There are more than 40 cultivars that produce a display from late June through mid-September. Visitors never cease to admire the display.

Lilies are one of the easier plants to grow. By selecting a combination of early, mid-season, and late-blooming varieties there can be nearly continuous blooms. (They are also great for the cut-flower garden.) Best of all, these hardy bulbs require minimal care and grow into large clusters of flower stems over time.

Many plants are called "lily." But, when we speak of lilies we mean the "true lilies," those that belong to the genus, Lilium. These plants grow from a fleshy bulb with overlapping scales that have no protective coating. Excluded are the daylilies that grow from a rhizome and have no fragrance. True lilies grow stiff stems and narrow strap-like leaves along the stems. They produce large, showy flowers at the tips of stems. Their flowers are trumpet-shaped, bell-shaped, or bowl-shaped and may have reflexed flowers (petals that turn back on themselves). The flowers can nod downwards or face outwards or upwards and they come in a variety of colors. Many are wonderfully fragrant.

It is not too early to start planning. Look for lilies rated hardy to Zone 6a if you live on the East End of Long Island. Asiatic and Oriental lilies are the most popular types. Asiatics are the easiest to grow because they are very hardy and are not fussy about soil types (so long as the soil has good drainage). Orientals have large blooms and heavy perfume, but are more particular about soil requirements.

If buying lilies, select them based on height, blooming time, and color to provide longevity and variation. Rock Cottage favorites include: 'Casa Blanca,' a pure white growing to five feet and blooming in August/September; 'Beige Beauty,' an ivory/apricot with purple spots that blooms in July; 'Corsica,' a pink that grows to three feet and blooms in June/July; 'Dawn Star,' a cream-colored of two feet blooming in July; 'Black Beauty,' a dark red that blooms in August and grows to six feet; and 'Stargazer,' a three-foot crimson blooming in August. All of these have a wonderful, heady scent. Our point of view: why grow lilies without the fragrance?

While it is too late to plant lilies now, it is not too late to plan for fall. Lilies can be planted from September through mid-October. Or, you can plant them in spring once the soil is workable. You can also find container-grown lilies at local nurseries that can be added to the garden throughout the growing season. When purchasing, select only firm, plump bulbs that have roots attached. Plant them soon after purchase, as these bulbs never go dormant and must not dry out. This is especially true if you mail order bulbs.

All lilies do best when grown where they can receive at least six hours of sunlight. They grow taller and more spindly and may flop over in lesser light. For the best results, plant lilies in groups of three-to-five bulbs spaced about six inches apart. Smaller bulbs can be planted four inches deep and larger bulbs can be planted to a depth of six inches. Divide large clusters every three to four years or when the blooms diminish. Never plant the bulbs where the soil is wet. Planting the bulbs in raised beds and adding organic matter adds to their success. Fertilize bulbs once each spring with dehydrated cow manure and/or a phosphorous-rich, organic fertilizer.

Lilies have few pests. However, rabbits, squirrels, deer, and slugs munch on emerging shoots. Aphids can be a problem with the flower buds. Very damp weather may cause some types of blight and fungus. To help this, avoid watering lilies at night.

Deadhead the flowers as they fade to help maintain the bulbs' energy. However, never remove the stems or foliage as these are required to replenish the bulbs' energy for the next year. Only remove stems in late fall or early spring.

No garden flower is more satisfying or inspiring in the garden than lilies. Their magnificent flowers and perfume easily transform a garden into a place of whimsy and extravagance. Lilies seem to be a "must have" on every gardeners' gardening list!

I Came, I Sawed . . . I Conquered

Anyone who is anyone should have a chainsaw. Forget about the fancy suits, Rolex watches, and $2000 Blahniks – chainsaws are the thing to have this summer. Maybe they don't fit in a shoulder bag as well as an iPod, but when was the last time you saw an iPod cut down a tree? Handsaws? Give them to the kids to start a jug band.

I'm standing firm on this one. Get yourself a chainsaw and do something with your life. For my twentieth birthday, I got a chainsaw. Most people I knew were looking for cash or a Playstation, but I asked for a 16-inch Poulan and my parents (for some unknown reason) thought it was a good idea. Eight years later, while my friends have drunk away their money and broken their Playstations, I still have my saw and use it more often than you'd think.

So what's the big deal about it? Why would someone of the leisure class, coming out on a weekend away from the city, want a chainsaw?

First of all, unlike the city, you have trees out here. These trees need trimming, they need care and carving. Sure most people have landscapers that take care of it, but why not pick up a saw and sort it out yourself? Creating a canopy tree is great if you live on the water and are in need of shade but want to look out on the sea. Cut off all the lower limbs, then put up your feet and relax.

I generally don't use my saw for pruning, but rather for carving. Considered a crude method by many, in the right hands a chainsaw is a nifty tool for removing great deals of wood in a timely manner. Which returns me to the story of my birthday present... The summer I received the chainsaw, I spent months in a house with no TV, no telephone, no locks, no stove, and twenty minutes from anyone or anything. (For your own safety, keep a phone nearby just in case something happens.) What I did with the chainsaw was pretty much what anyone does with a chainsaw – I built a 12-foot long dugout canoe out of white oak. Now white oak happens to be one of the densest woods in the world, which, together with the fact that I had never used a chainsaw or knew anything about ballast may lead you to wonder why I would attempt to build a canoe. But I was young and foolish, and these trivial things didn't enter into the picture. I just knew I needed to build a canoe. And so I got to work on it – every day, eight hours of leaning over a tree, sawing away aimlessly at this piece of wood. By the end of the summer, after numerous gallons of gas, a sore back, shaky hands

(a hazard which occurs from using a saw too long, but goes away), I had a canoe. It weighed about 400 pounds and I never took it to see if it floated, partially because it was too heavy, partially because I had accidentally cut a hole in the side of the boat when I got a little too cocky with the saw. Whether it would have floated or not isn't the point of the story (it wouldn't have, by the way). The point of the story is that I learned how to handle a chainsaw. I realized that it can be used like any other tool an artist has; it can be delicate or it can be bold. Since then, I've built a grill out of a four foot tree stump. It was my mother's birthday and I was nearly out of cash. I found a stump in my garage, and having only about $20, I purchased a small hibachi, then went to work cutting a hole in the center of the stump to fit the grill. I was able to hollow out the stump, sand it down, polyurethane it and install the grill in about two days. My mother loved it. Though, like the canoe (which has since become a planter), we have never tested it to see if it works.

I'm not sure what the point of this article is, save to explain to you that chainsaws are great. When I'm not carving with mine, I'm trimming branches from trees, cutting fence posts, and chasing children around the neighborhood in a hockey mask (just kidding). Go out, get your own and have a little fun. They cost a lot less than a sailboat.

The Most Chic Room in the Dorm

There comes a time in everyone's life when they leave the mother nest and go off to college to make their own new home. For me this came four years early when my parents shipped me off to boarding school, but at least I feel prepared to leave at the end of the summer to decorate my new dorm room at college (I'm just kidding about the shipping away thing, I wanted to go...). For many young people this can be scary. Going off to a new school, possibly in a new state or even country, with a new roommate, and co-ed bathrooms is scary enough without having to worry about decorating a room. But I'm here to tell all you other class of 2010ers how to do it.

Stay away from Target. I know you can pronounce it a certain way to make it sound fancy, but really try to limit yourself to generic items only when shopping at big stores like that. If you don't watch out you might end up with the same Todd Oldham duvet and lampshade as every other dummy on your floor. That doesn't seem like a fashionable way to make friends, now does it? I'm not saying you need to be extravagant when decorating your room. My mother is an interior designer and she once had a client ask her to decorate her 14-year-old daughter's dorm room! My mother told her she didn't think her services were necessary and gave her the same advice that I am about to give you. Look around your house; some of the coolest things that I brought back with me each year to furnish my room, I found in my attic, like my Where's Waldo trash can. Also, don't buy your posters on allposters.com. That's what everyone else does and what happens to them? They all have the same Jim Morrison poster. If you really like Ferris Bueller's Day Off, then I guess it's OK to give in and hang up such a typical poster, but here is your chance to shine. This might be the first time you've ever been able to decorate your own room according to what you want. Why not take this opportunity to be creative?

Tapestries are inevitable. I'm not going to steer you away from that because chances are you won't run into a repeat tapestry. I also think it's more fun not to have everything entirely matching and coordinated. That's what your room at home is for, the one your mom and dad decorated for you. Putting pictures up of your life is a must. You need to show all your new classmates how popular you were in high school, so pick out your favorite photographs and sticky-tac them up here and there.

I guess independence is kind of a theme of this article and with independence comes making your own bed (eek! I know). To make your life easier, I would limit the amount of things you need to fold up everyday. Duvets are great because all you need to do to make the bed is pull it up and flatten it out; none of this hospital corner stuff that our parents had to endure. Your duvet is another chance for you to stand out. If anything, this is the thing to splurge on. A good duvet cover can make a big difference. Before my freshman year in high school I searched for two weeks before I found my duvet cover and after four years sleeping with it, I'll probably bring it with me to college for another four years!

Organizers are also key. Your room is probably not going to be that big and there's probably going to be another person you have to share it with. Even if closet space is included at your school, I'd go to Target or Wal-Mart and stock up on plastic organizers and space savers. Shelf space that can hang from the closet is great for all those heavy sweaters that you can't find room to stash anywhere else. In the same way, compact furniture is great. From experience I can tell you that a foldable chair would have been a lot more practical than the big green, leather armchair that was buried in my clothes in my old dorm room. It is very possible to be stylish and practical with your space. Look at the furniture of the 1950s if you don't believe me.

Whatever you decide to do with your room, even if not according to feng shui, make sure you create a space for yourself to live and be happy in one of the biggest transitions of your life.

Back to the Basics. Home Ec. For Everyone

Home Economics is a subject that seems to have been banished from our public education system. We have written it off as sexist and as a contributing element to the subjugation of women. When the subject of Home Ec was at its peak of popularity in the public school system, girls and boys were divided up by gender to take Home Ec or Woodshop. It was strongly discouraged, if not forbidden, for any student to take the class of the other gender. In Home Ec class, textbooks with titles such as "Experiences with Foods," "The Teen Guide to Homemaking," and "The Threshold to Adult Living" taught (female) students how to cook, clean, and sew. This subject and these books were unarguably sexist and limiting for women. One book has a feminine subject performing every chore and every step in the cooking process in every chapter, up until the chapter on grilling, when the subject inexplicably turns masculine. And in another book, an interesting passage guides women on how to be a proper wife, "The importance of being a good wife cannot be emphasized too greatly. For instance, the Air Force has found 'a direct correlation between aircraft mishaps and unsettled home life ... The husbands get to thinking about rows with the little woman while they are up there and the first thing you know they press the wrong button.'" While these classes and books were ridiculous, the idea behind Home Economics does have some merit. It is amazing how many people, men and women, don't know how to do a simple task such as sewing a button, doing laundry, cooking, cleaning, or the rules of simple etiquette. There are a few things that everyone should know before they cross over "The Threshold to Adult Living."

Sewing a button; I am amazed that some people don't know how to do this. This little skill will save the day again and again. To begin, if you have lost the original button, try and find one that is similar. Look inside the clothing for the extra that manufacturers sometimes include or buy one that matches the size and color of the other buttons. Then choose thread that matches the thread color used on the other buttons, the color of the button, or the color of the material. You should cut a piece of thread about a foot and a half long and thread the needle. It helps if you lick the end of the thread before trying to thread it. After the thread is through the eye, move the needle to the middle of the thread and fold it in half and knot it. Place the button on top of the material where you intend to sew it into place. It is very important to line up the button with the buttonhole before sewing it into place. Start sewing from underneath the material; push up through the fabric and through the hole on the button. Then guide your needle through the other hole on the button and back down through the fabric. Repeat this three times then secure the thread on the bottom side of the material with a knot. Use your needle to tie a knot around a few loops of thread at the back of the button. This process is really quite easy and you will save yourself a lot of frustration if you take a little time to learn it.

Setting the table; this knowledge is essential for any meal from fancy dinner party to a simple family affair. Dinner plates should be placed approximately 2 inches from the table's edge, centered on the placemat or squarely in front of each chair. If you are having soup, place the soup bowl on top of the dinner plate. The salad plate should be placed above the forks, to the left. The bread plate goes on the right. Silverware should be placed on the table in the order it will be used starting from the outside and working your way in towards the plate. Forks are placed to the left of the dinner plate; knives and spoons go to the right. Knives should be placed with their cutting-edge toward the dinner plate, except the butter knife which should be laid flat on a bread plate. The bottoms of the utensils should be lined up evenly. Water glasses should be above the dinner knife with other glasses nearby, usually in a triangle formation. Finally, napkins can be placed on the plate, next to the forks or inside the drinking glass. You won't be embarrassed by poor etiquette if you start by learning how to set a proper table.

There are many other things that need to be covered. Everyone should know how to change a tire or a blown fuse. You need to know how to do the laundry and not have the colors run and how to iron a shirt perfectly. Being a great cook is something to be proud of, but everyone should also know how to make a simple meal. Things like making shopping lists, comparing prices, and living on a budget are necessary in life. Learning them early can only be helpful. Knowing how to do all these tasks doesn't mean that they have to be the only thing we do. Maybe it's time for a new generation of Home Economics.

Don't Eat The Plants!

Several years ago, while I was living in Scotland, my parents came for a visit. We traveled to the highland and the island in constant awe of the scenery, but it was a flower on the Isle of Mull which really caught my father's attention. Rather a burly man, it was odd to see him so intrigued with a flower, but when he began to explain the story of how his grandmother had "Fairy Thimbles" growing in her yard when he was young, I began to understand the connection. As beautiful as Fairy Thimbles (a.k.a Foxglove, a.k.a Digitalis) are, and as reminiscent of his childhood they maybe be, the fact that they are poisonous has always deterred my parents from planting them in their own yard. But come on, how poisonous can they really be? For that matter, how poisonous are any flowers?

In the Odyssey, Odysseus and his crew end up in the Land of the Lotus Eaters. Some of the men ate these fancy flowers and forgot everything they ever knew. Can this really happen? Fine, maybe a couple of poppy flowers will knock you for a loop, but forgetting everything you've ever known? Get real.

To put my money where my mouth is, so to speak, I will eat several poisonous flowers and tell you what happens. If you get to the end of this article and it stops abruptly, mid-sentence, mid-word, you'll know that these are, in fact, dangerous flowers that should be avoided. Either that or I ate a lotus and forgot how to type. So let's begin.

The Digitalis looks like a series of little bells dangling from a single stem sometimes reaching four feet in height. If large quantities of its leaves are ingested the heart and arteries begin to constrict, spiking blood pressure and causing irregular heartbeats. Though a derivative is used by the medical world, eating the plant, as is, can lead to mental confusion (maybe it was the Land of the Foxglove Eaters?) and is sometime fatal, but it seems like a lot has to be eaten to die.

Another flower that is beautiful, but deadly, is the Oleander. The five-petal flower is a captivatingly elegant tropical, but will kill you - which is the same thing I was told about the women of Tijuana the last time I was planning a trip south of the border. My travels aside, this plant also affects the heart - as do the women of Tijuana, I am told. More serious than foxglove, 1/4 pound of leaves will kill a horse. Who in their right mind is going to eat a quarter pound of oleander leaves? The truth is, even a small amount can kill pets and humans. Much of the time, this is sudden and without any warning, so if you've got kids, or dogs, or a hankering for eating floral arrangements, stay away from the oleander.

The next plant is deadly, but only if you don't treat the symptoms. It isn't actually one plant but an entire family, the Aroid family, which contains Elephant Ear, Dumb Cane and Skunk Cabbage (all with rather appetizing names). Once again, I'll ask the question, who is going to eat a bunch of leaves from a plant? That aside, there is a way Dumb Cane can kill you, but not by attacking the heart or the nervous system or anything like that. Instead, the toxins in the leaves can cause extreme swelling of the tongue. If untreated the tongue can swell to the point that it will cut off the air to the lungs and the poor dumb fool who decided to chew on some Dumb Cane will suffocate. An odd note, Dumb Cane gets its name from the fact that it was once used to punish people who spoke too much. It seems a small dose would cause the tongue to swell just enough to keep them from talking.

If you want to shut someone up for good, you may want reach for the Castor Plant. Though lovely, ornamental, and harvested for its oil, this is the real deal. The poisoning from ricin (toxin) in the Castor beans begins with a little stomach irritation, some sweating, then an irregular heartbeat, followed by collapse, convulsions and death. It sounds like a great way to spend a summer afternoon. About 25 grams will take down your horse, so just imagine how little it will take to put down your enemies?

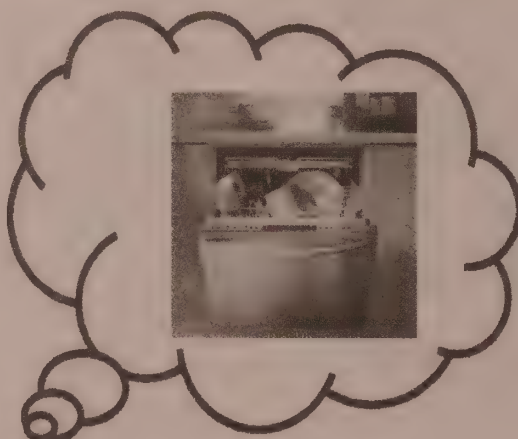

As for the lotus, don't eat it. I can't remember why, just don't eat it. On that note, don't eat any plants that can't be found in the produce section of your local grocery store. Clearly I do not condone poisoning husbands or wives, and quite honestly, I don't have a bad word to say about the women of Tijuana.

Billowing in the Wind

It has come to my attention that lately, people have been forgetting to hang curtains in their homes, particularly in windows that are easily seen from the road. Whether this is due to fashion, laziness or a lack of free time, I don't know. What I do know is that not all people are aware of how exposed their houses are, or how much complete strangers can glean of a person's lifestyle from a quick glance from the road. Of course, this intrusion leads to obvious problems when the rooms on display are the more private rooms of the home, but it also presents other troubles. For instance, that plasma-screen television in your living room – do you really want everyone to know that you own one? And do you always want the neighbors to know when you are having company over, even if you've neglected to tell your vacationing parents you'll be hosting a little get-together? Curtains really are essential, for a variety of reasons.

Curtains do a lot to protect one's privacy, but perhaps you feel that they block out the sun. It is true that many types of heavier curtains do prevent the sun's rays from basking the room in light, but this doesn't necessarily mean that you should exclude them. Curtains can protect the upholstery on your furniture from fading quickly in the sunlight, and they can be essential when you're trying to block out the glare on your television screen. Choosing light cotton fabric, in shades of pale blue, yellow or splashed with a pattern of stripes or florals, can keep your curtains from darkening the room. And besides – you don't have to keep them closed all the time!

Another good option is using bamboo curtains. Bamboo works well on full-length windows or even sliding glass doors. This type of curtain is perfect for creating that laid-back, beachy vibe. After all, don't they make beach mats from bamboo? To make these curtains, pieces of bamboo are boiled, dried and sewn together with wire, then hung from a wooden top piece. They can hang down, or they can be quickly pulled up to let the light in, either using the "Roman-fold" or the "roll-up" method. Bamboo curtains can also be a good choice if you have lots of kids around, since a quick minute with a sponge is enough to get rid of those peanut butter-and-jelly sandwich stains.

Generally, you want to let the light in, but there are plenty of times you don't – particularly in the early hours of the morning. Gauzy curtains are lovely and romantic in the bedroom, but they don't help much if you want to sleep in. Use these flimsy clouds for atmosphere, but be sure to have a set of pull-down room – darkening shades as well. Chiffon and silk are also great fabrics for the bedroom, and these too let the light in. While better for a secluded locale, these fabrics can be adapted for a less private spot if used in darker colors. Hanging chiffon in a reddish shade has the added benefit of filtering the light and giving your room a tinted hue.

Another great option is to fashion curtains from sheets to match the bed linens for a harmonious look in the bedroom. Your room will look completely pulled together with almost no effort on your part. A great way to pull back these curtains once you're awake is to install those little curtain holders on either side of the window – just secure the fabric behind the hook, and you're good to go.

For a look catered specifically to your home, choose curtains in a color that will complement the view out your window – if you look out on woods, try greens, if on water, blue is a good choice.

Yet another option is to use a lace fabric. Lace material is particularly suited for smaller windows, such as those in the kitchen or bathroom, for when hung from larger windows, it overwhelms the room and gives it a stuffy Victorian feel. White lace, or even crochet, works perfectly as a stand-alone fabric in the kitchen, while in the bathroom you may want to add another material. Use a light cotton fabric and be sure to choose a color other than white to highlight the lace's intricate make-up.

This all being said, if you are sure that your windows are hidden from view, feel free to just forget the curtains. But, homeowners on Noyac Road, this does not mean you...

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

East End real estate is no longer a business, it is a phenomenon. In a time when the market was expected to at the very least level off, numbers set by the sales of Hamptons estates, land and prime retail space continue to reach staggering heights. Following the advice of seasoned Hamptons brokers, properties that are priced right sell almost immediately. It is all about location and if you own a property in the Hamptons you are sitting on some of the most prime real estate in the country and everyone, it seems, wants a piece of the pie. There is only so much oceanfront to go around, however, and that is the commodity buyers pay the big bucks for. In fact they will pay big bucks just to be near it.

Recently in Water Mill an estate reportedly changed hands at just about $20 million. The property was purchased by real estate investor Jay Furman and his wife, Vicki, from Ted Forstmann who was known for holding tennis tournaments on the property's three courts. In addition to the main house, the estate has three guest houses.

A new listing on Lake Agawam, in Southampton, has just hit the market at $48 million. That's right, on the Lake. There are so few oceanfront properties available at the present time that when they come on to the market they virtually fly out the door. Some oceanfront deals that take place never reach the market. Again, Hampton real estate brokers have creative and unconventional methods for selling these high-end properties and must stay abreast of each listing as it comes on the market in order to compete in one of the most competitive real estate markets in the country, if not the world. Brokers go to great lengths and sometimes great expense, as was recently proven when Brown Harris Stevens held a combination open house fashion event that featured Victoria's Secret models at the $40 million Church Estate compound on the ocean, in Montauk.

In Quogue, a one-hundred-and-two-year-old historical mansion has just gone up for sale or more accurately, up for bid. The property is known as Meadowcroft, on the Quantuck Bay, and celebrated its 100th anniversary in the summer of 2004. Because some East End properties are so unique, they are hard to price. This one, designed by artist and architect Wilson Eyre, is a fine example of Arts & Crafts architecture and has that precise dilemma, so owners Ammon and Lynn Shibolet have decided to auction the property. It is the very last home that exists on Long Island that was designed by Eyre, who was the founder of House and Garden Magazine. A book by Michael McKenzie, to commemorate the estate, was released in conjunction with its 100th birthday two years ago when I was fortunate enough to tour the mansion and its waterfront grounds. The detail of the interior woodwork and grand arched sand & plaster exterior entrances that are adorned by pouring fountains, transport one back into time and the days of pure Hamptons elegance. Sculpted figures grace the sprawling back lawns. Huge cut stone fireplaces are in most every room. Mr. Eyre carefully thought out each detail of this home as one would a work of art.

Actually, it is a work of art. An impressive library includes a built-in bar and billiards table. The most beautiful of all rooms was a sitting room with a bay window and seat, hand-painted wallpaper, built-in shelves and fireplace that had an expansive view of the bay and grounds. The entrance to the drive is lit with 1904 Tiffany gate lanterns that sit atop brick & stone pillars. There is a guest house, formal gardens and covered porch area with overhead fans that overlook the original in-ground pool. It also can accommodate the owner's boat at its private dock. The home was also the site of the Designer Show House in 1988. There are far too many details in this unique home to mention and the privileged buyer will be purchasing not just a home, but a piece of Eastern Long Island history.

Private showings will take place and the owners will then review bids. It is expected to be a cash deal with no contingencies.

FINDERS KEEPERS

Dear Dan,

After a great late evening at a Fourth of July party at a wonderful home overlooking Georgica beach, I needed to wake my tired body by taking a stroll along Main beach.

The clean up crews were already there feverishly working, to maintain the pristine reputation of the Hampton beaches. As I strolled and reminisced about last evening, I passed a stunning pair of men's polished black leather Kenneth Cole shoes. How could someone leave these behind? I hope they realized it in the morning, but these were not what one would slip on for the day. Strolling along I came across a wonderful find, spotless white linen cocktail napkins with a monogram S, scattered along Georgica beach! How could I resist? I scooped them up and will enjoy them until the rightful owner claims them. It was a perfect set of —! (Claim them if you know how many you lost). Again how could people be so careless as to toss their linen napkins, or maybe their guests thought they were paper and didn't see one of those famous signs warning them they would be prosecuted and receive a $400 fine for littering! You know they deserve to lose them. Well, my walk got more interesting. A beautiful silver-plated corkscrew with a Chateau Petrus 1995 cork attached, (you know it's illegal to have alcohol on the beach). I am going to pick up a bottle today and just see if this was left by a wine connoisseur. Next, a pair of fashionable J. Crew sandals, a leaded crystal wineglass, darn, only one, and here is the most important reason I am writing this article. Not only are people litterers but they are careless. I discovered a set of Buzz Chew Cadillac car keys with house keys attached. Now here is a hint to whom these may belong. The person is frugal because there is a CVS discount card attached.

OOPS

Dear Dan,

FYI - Jan Silver - "The Who" have not yet disbanded, despite your report that they did just that after Keith Moon died. And real estate writer - it was well reported earlier this year that Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg sold her Sagaponack residence, despite your report that she is still a Hamptons resident.

Everything else was OK this week, as usual.
Cheers!

HAPPY FOURTH

Dear Dan,

I am writing to you because I believe your paper provides a wealth of helpful and insightful information to the reader. It seems to me that we have all become too complacent in recent years and have lost sight of the fact that we are all human beings and our goal should be to reach out in kindness and friendship to one another. With July 4, we all need to be reminded of how blessed we are to live in a free country and enjoy all the benefits of our freedom. We need to help those less fortunate and be grateful that we are in a position to offer assistance. We need to see more with the eyes of compassion and be less hostile toward our neighbor. We need to adopt the principles of Mr. Jay Sears who believes that "Kindness can change the world." and "One person really can make a difference."

As one who shares the beliefs and principles so often expressed by Mr. Sears in the article about him in your wonderful paper, I believe that if you can lay your head down at the end of the day knowing you shared a kind word, a smile or a meal with someone in need; you've made a worthwhile contribution and truly have made a difference.

God Bless America.

Theresa Solan

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

Dear Dan:

As you know, the County is undertaking a one week pilot program to create two eastbound lanes to try and reduce morning congestion. This pilot program will take place next week.

While we think this pilot program will alleviate congestion and improve the traffic flow, benefiting many people and many businesses, we are concerned that some people & some businesses may be confused or inconvenienced.

In order to minimize confusion and inconvenience, we are trying to disseminate information about this County initiative to as many people as possible in our community. The County has prepared one document regarding this plan and the Town has prepared a supplemental Public Service Announcement. These documents are posted on the Southampton Town website.

Thanks for your help. Please feel free to give me a call if you or your members have any questions. 283-6000x165.

Police Blotter

Kite Fight

Two kite surfers in Amagansett got into a fight and police had to be involved. They were fighting over territory on the water. One kite surfer told police that the other kite surfer posed a danger because he was not well trained in the art of kite surfing. Police made no arrests, as the kite surfers had a kite surfing duel over the dispute. The losing kite surfer left with his kite between his legs.

Spit On

A man in Amagansett was riding his bicycle along the side of the road when a car drove by and somebody in the car spat on him. Police were able to get a sample of the spit and are running it through their registered spit offenders data base.

Lighting Crashes

A man in East Hampton reported to police that lighting struck his house and left a three foot hole in an upstairs wall. Police told he owner of the house to call an electrician to inspect the wiring in the house.

The man has complained to police that he, along with everyone in his family are now constantly doing the electric slide.

It Puts The Lotion On Its Skin

A man called police after a woman locked him in the basement of his own home. Police arrived at the scene and were able to unlock the door and release the man from the basement. He told police that the woman is his wife and that she locked him in the basement for staying out too late on Friday night. The man was quoted saying, "She'll soon be my ex-wife."

* * *

Pool Pump Missing

A pool pump was reported stolen from a Montauk residence. The swimming pool at the Montauk residence is sad.

* * *

Buddha Stolen

A very heavy, cement, two foot tall Buddha was stolen from a Sag Harbor residence. Police believe that the thieves must either really like Buddha statues or think they can sell the Buddha statue on the stolen Buddha statue black market.

Lost Wife

A man in Sagaponak reported to police that his wife was missing. Police began searching for the wife and later on in the evening were able to locate her. The wife was found by police after they called her cell phone. She was avoiding her husband's phone calls because, and I quote, "I'm on vacation."

Urinator

Police arrested 7 people over the weekend in Southampton, mostly for urinating in various places in Agawam Park. Most of the urinating people were quoted saying, "Dude, you don't understand. I really, really, like really had to go."

Not A Good Day For A Robber

An employee from a store in Bridgehampton said that somebody stole the cash register at the store and made off with $15 in cash. The robber is by far the lamest thief that we have ever heard about in the Hamptons. The storeowner has said that most people buy things in his store with a credit card and not to worry, he will be able to stay in business after the robbery.
